When the Korean jet failed to respond to radio contact the Soviet pilot changed altitude and rocked its wings. It then flashed its lights at the jumbo crew, "but neither waggling nor flashing brought the necessary result".

General Romanov, whose remarks were reported by Tass, reinforced the theory of mistaken identity by saying that the jumbo was flying at night at a height of 8,000m (26,000ft) to 10,000m and that its outline resembled that of the American RS135 reconnais-Sance aircraft.

He confirmed that the Soviet fighter had fired warning shots with tracer shells, adding: This is firing from an interceptor plane parallel to the course of an intruder plane." He said "rules provide for such a measure".

General Romanov said air-traffic controllers in America and Japan had acted "strangely". The jumbo was "stalking under cover of night above our territory", a deliberate action designed as a 'rude provocation".

General Romanov said American warplanes, some launched from aircraft carriers, had violated Soviet airspace in the area of the formerly Japanese Kucile islands nine times this year and there had been similar incidents near Ratmanov island in the Bering Strait.

The US Air Force and Navy were carrying out directly-sanctioned provocations to sow suspicion and mistrust between Russia and America.

General Romanov's remarks were read out on the main television news bulletin. In the same broadcast a television commentator revealed that the Korean arieraft had been carrying

The jumbo has for the most part been described as an "intruder plane" in official Soviet accounts. The commentator told Russian viewers that the fact that the 747 was carrying passengers made the American action in using it for spying all the more

In the US. President Reagan is to make a nation-wide television broadcast tonight, in which he will set out action the US intends to take.

The President discussed a number of points with Con-gressional leaders who were briefed at the White House yesterday about the disaster, which cost the lives of 269 people. Mr Reagan told the Congressmen that his response would be "calm, controlled, but absolutely firm". Despite the strong language used by the President to express his horror at "this murder of innocent civilians", the US response is expected to be restrained and largely limited to an international effort to condemn the attack and take measures to make it safer to fly nearer the Soviet Union. According to US officials the President has dismissed suggestions that he should cancel the new five-year grain agreement signed last month. He has also ruled out any suspension of the two rounds of arms reduction talks with the Soviet Union in Geneva. According sources, the US response would be centred on the International Aviation Organization (ICAO), a UN agency based in Montreal, and the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations

Among other moves the US is expected to make is to support an emergency meeting of thte ICAO to consider improved warning measures to prevent aircraft from straying into Soviet airspace.

In the White House it is recognized that the US still has to do business with the Soviet union no matter how appalled Amencans may be at the shooting down of an unarmed airliner and for this reason Mr George Shultz, the Secretary of State, will go ahead as planned with his meeting with Mr Andrei Gromyko, the Soviet Foreign Minister, in Madrid on Thursday,

However, the meeting is being shortened and Mr Shultz will use it primarily to express "a feeling of revulsion over the incident.

Speaking at a press conference on the eve of the annual Trades Union Congress, in Blackpool, he dislosed a fall of 500,000 up to the TUC-affiliated unions, but he argued that the unions would survive the present "hostile political environment".

Clearly anxious to dispel the growing view that the TUC is set for a permanent decline in its power and influence, Mr Murray nerge from the present challenges stronger than ever.

The TUC conference, which opens this morning, will be the on for a sharp conflict over the labour movement's direction and strategy. The conference starts with what is likely to be a closely fought battle over the reform of the TUC general council. Left-wing unions want to scrap a five-year experiment that gives large unions automatic seats on the labour movement's ruling body, but the moderates are expected to fight off the challenge.

The new system under which a chosen tomorrow, will mean that the militants are reduced to about 51-strong body that will reflect the present disposition of member-ship rather than the historic manual roots of the TUC.

The transport workers will also seek to retain two of their autonomous sections covering agricultural and textile workers as motion to exclude them from individual membership is likely to succeed, prompting yet another constitutional crisis. If the land workers and dyers and bleachers are compelled to join the delegation of their parent union, the voting cards will be with drawn and composite motions in which they are participating will have to be rewritten.

Mr Jack Jones, former general secretary of the Transport and General Workers Union, yester-day warned the Government that ers are becoming incressingly concerned about the level ir state benefits.

Mr Jones, who is chairman of several pensioners' pressure groups, said at a TUC raily in Blackpool: "I warn the Government do not drive us down. Even the mock and mild in the community can turn. Mr Jones said that pensioners and the disabled are suffering a worsening of their standard of living. They are to be victims of a deliberate fraud this November when pension increases will be about £1.50 a week less than the repeated promises of the Prime Minister and the Government, that our pensious would be maintained in line with the movement of prices", he said.

Mr Len Murray, the TUC General Secretary, said that the money which the Prime Minister sought to "save" did not belong to her. It belongs to the British people and there was no evidence that the British people wanted to treat pensioners badly.

Dr FitzGerald's statement came as thousands of Roman Catholic priests yesterday urged churchgoers throughout the country to vote "Yes" in the referendum. Abortion is illegal in the republic under the Offences Against the Person Act, 1861, but lobbying by a group of powerful right-wing Roman Catholics secured political agreement for a referendum to include this ban in the constitution: The wording

The state acknowledges the right to life of the unborn and, with due regard to the equal rights to life of the mother, guarantees in its laws to respect, and, as far as practicable, by its laws, to defend and vindicate that right.

Opponents of the amendment argue that many commonly used contraceptives could be banned and operations to save a mother's life which also terminate preg-nancy could be outlawed if the amendment is passed. Despite bitter divisions within the legal and medical professions over the wording and the opposition of the Protestant churches, the amendment is expected to be passed, largely because it is backed by the Roman Catholic church and the main opposition party Fianna

In his statement on Saturday, Or FitzGerald said it was his "duty as a Christian concerned above all with the protection of human life from the start, and concern with peace and reconcili-ation in this island" to vote against the amendment, He put the full authority of the Government and the overwhelming majority of his Fine Gael party behind his opinion that "If we adopt this amendment we could be opening up the very possibility that we are all attempting to close off: the introduction of abortion".

There were, he said, multiple uncertainties and different risks about the meaning of the wording and persons who said otherwise were taking quite extraordinary responsibilities on

More court help in appeal cases

By Peter Evans Home Affairs Correspondent

The courts are to be given more scope for righting miscarriages of justice, but critics say the changes do not go far enough.

The Lord Chief Justice, Lord Lane, has written to Justice, the British section of the International Commission of Jurists, saying the Court of Appeal Criminal Division "intends to exercise its discretion under Section 23 (1) of the Criminal Appeal Act in favour of the appellant more readily than it has in the past."

The change follows articles in The Times and a BBC series on rough justice". Section 23 gives wide powers to enable fresh evidence to be considered.

Lord Lane's letter throws more ighton the Court's intentions on a highly controversial issue which calls into question in the appeal system. Lord Lane adds to a Home Office reply to calls for reform made by the Home Affairs Select Committee of MPs after the disclosures in The Times and BBC programme. The MPs wanted to go further

Coach fares cut in rail-road price war

By Michael Baily Transport Edites

Inter-city coach fares, already less than half the rail fare on many routes, are to be harved this month. There will also be special cheap day returns of between a third and a quarter of the standard rail fare for pensioners.

The new fares are being introduced from September 20 by National Express, the inter-city wing of the state-owned National Bus Company in an effort to boost midweek travel.

Passengers travelling on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday will be able to buy return tickets for the price of a single, returning either the same week or later. There will be extra benefits for young and old, and special cheap day returns will be available to pensioners without any evidence of identification or special travel card as is required on British Rail.

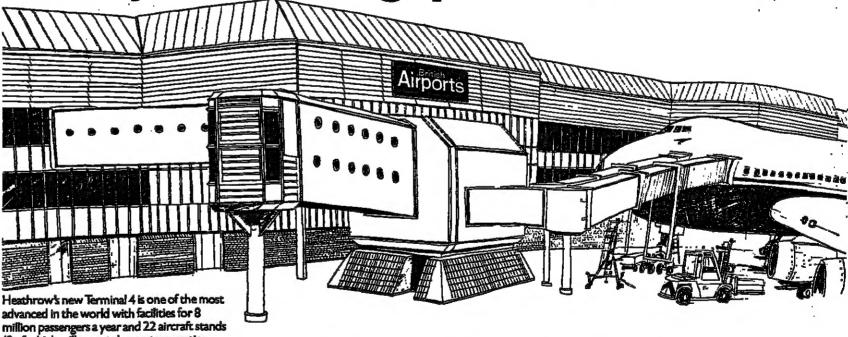

Typical of the new fares will be a £6.50 return Liverpool to London and £4.25 day return for pensioners and students. This compares with £15 for a return by coach before the road-rail fare war sparked off by the 1980 Transport Act. British Rail's cheap "favour"

The Transport Act allowed coach operators to start services wherever they liked at whatever fares they chose without any right on the part of established operators, including British Rail, to object to the Traffic Commissioners. Since then, coach fares have fallen by as much as three-quarters, and inter-city coach travel doubled to 16 million passengers a year between 1980 and 1982.

British Rail, whose costs are substantially higher than those of the coaches, responded with a series of cheap "favour" fares and massive expansion in half-price railcards for pensioners, students

These are popular and have successfully maintained the volume of rail travel, but some British Rail managers fear that much of the traffic generated is being carried at a loss.

More than a million people are to be added to the potential audience for local commercial radio amid evidence of a sharp decline in listening figures.
The launch last week Southern Sound in Brighton is due to be followed today by two new stations serving the Wrexham-Chester areas and Stoke-on-

Tomorrow local radio execu tives meet in London to decide whether the listening boom has whether the listening boom has come seriously unstuck. Before them will be figures from the Joint Industry Committee for Radio Audience Research (JICRAR), showing a fall in audience of about 5 per cent. The details, particularly the percentage of the population reached each week by commercial radio, have been withheld so far. The suspicion widely voiced is that the expansion of the television network is responsible. Breakfast television, notably since Roland Rat started on TV am, is taking a larger slice of the morning audience. But radio chiefs are dismissive. "It is no contest." Mr James Gordon chairman of the Association of Independent Radio Contractors - Marketing Committee and managing director of Radio Clyde,

"We are absolutely certain that breakfast television could not possible account for the fall in radio listening."

He said market research by the AIRC had established that at most 10 per cent of he drop could and Signal Radio will bring the commercial network to 43 stations, about two-thirds of its projected ultimate size, serving an adult population of 36 million. A 5 per cent fall in weekly reach, it confirmed, would thus represent about 1.75 million people switching off.

Against this has to be set the fact that all radio has suffered. Weekly listening figures are down from 91 to 87 per cent of the population, but the spring of 1982, with which this year's results are compared, saw the Falklands War and hence some thing of a radio boom.

greach has also showed comparable variations before, down from 52 per cent in 1980, for example to 49 per cent in 1981.

More important, the advertising industry appears to be backing commercial radio, viewing the new figures as probably freakish and treating breakfast television with considerable scepticisim.

The AIRC estimates that the national component of stations advertising revenue, a key bar-cometer of the attitudes of the big London agencies, has doubled in a year. Total advertising sales are running at least a quarter higher than last year. Many blue-chip accounts, such as Procter and Gamble, have moved on to radio for the first time and in some regions are using it as a substitute advertising industry's enthusiasm for radio. A typical price for a 30second peak-time on television might be £40.000, against £4.500 for a nationally networked radio commercial - nine times the money but only six times the audience. TV-am, by contrast, can command only a few hundred

The surge in TV-am's ratings to 1.2 million, still less than a third of commercial radio's morning peak, has produced a guarded response from advertisers because of the large numbers of children in the figure.

A mixed blessing descends on India

From Michael Hamlyn, Mathura

The creamy mud-rich waters of the Yamuna river swirl through the north-eastern state of Uttar Pradesh into the low lying streets of Mathura one of the seven holy towns of the Hindu religion.

Elderly Sanyasis - men who have given up the good life, including salt and spice in their food, to dedicate themselves to their gods - hitch up their langis and paddle to the inundated temples on the river banks to douse themselves in the holy river water.

Water sanctifies as it cleanses. Water sanctines as a cleaness.
Water makes the crops grow.
And this is the time of year that water appears is abundance all over India.

Water also kills. According to the Minister for Irrigation almost a thousand people have died in floods around the country since the rains began here at the end of June. He added that 8.3 million June. He added that 8.5 million people had been badly affected by the downpours, while damage to crops and dwellings is estimated at 2,400m rupees (£160m).

One hundred people have died in Uttar Pradesh and 5,000 have lost their homes and 1,600 villages have been struck.

According to Mr Brahaspati Sharma, the Mathura district magistrate, 518 houses have been completely destroyed in his district, and another 4,200 damaged. Twenty people and more than 200 sucred cows have been killed.

Between here and Delhi the flat land is waterlogged. Pools of water, much enjoyed by the buffaloes, who dank themselves until only their nostrils and horns show above the surface, slop against the road's edge.

Women pick thier way between the flooded fields, daintily tucking their saris up between their legs and still the rain pours

At the height of a monsoon storm it seems impossible to tell where the rain stops and the flood begins. Sometimes the rain travels horizontally, whipped by the wind into a wheel of water. Sometimes it pours vertically, in thousands of square miles, with a relentlessness that makes it appear unending.

But the rain cools the land after the fierce summer sun, and the monsoon season is welcomed as a blessed relief from the heat of the plains. It stays damp for months, and the garden walls turn green with algae while the border plants may like Occasion. border plants grow like Quater-mass's monsters.

This year is a good monsoon, promising lush harvests later in the year and ending long-standing droughts in some states. The three-year drought in Bihar has been broken, though so forcefully that crops have been lost, washed ways as the Mehananda river. away as the Mahananda river. burst its banks.

east the floods have inundated towns and washed away roads. In Haryana relief and resue oper-ations are in full swing in Rohtak and Sonepat. In Punjab, roads have disappeared before the rushing waters of the rivers escaping their confinements.

In Maharashtra 112 peop lost their lives, while in nearby Guierat at the start of the season a freak storm barst countless small dams and 600 people died in the following disaster.

Bombay, which can generally count on a heavy monsoon has outdone itself this year. Since June more than 10ft of rain has fallen in the city. It is only the second time since records began that the rainfall has exceeded 2,500mm in one season. It is now at 2,700mm and still raining.

It has been raining even in Madras, which has been suffer-ing from a fearful drought. Tamil Nidu does not usually benefit from the south-west monsoon, which brings rain to the rest of India, as it is sheltered by the defensive wall of the Nilgiris hills. The state's main rainfall is expected from the shorter and slighter north-east monsoon in

But this year the prayers of the beleaguered citizens, the magic of Californian rainmakers, or the simple vagary of the world's weather have brought sufficient rain to ensure that the worst of the city's water shortage is over.

Supporters of the murdered Filipino opposition leader Benigno Aquino intend to mount a prolonged civil disobedience campaign against the government of President Ferdinand Marcos.

It will be modelled on the nonviolent protest by Gandhi against the British in India. although opposition sources say details and methods are still being discussed.

Leaders of the People's Power party, which is more commonly known by its acronym Laban, met over the weekend to discuss the mechanics of what some observers believe could become a powerful populist movement and serious challenge to the 18-year Marcos regime.

SPECTRUM

In the 1960s robots were hailed as the answer to the problems of the industrial world. Today the experts are not so sure. In the first of three articles Piers Burnett explains why the march of the reliable cheap and accurate machine has been halted fashionable to assess the international balance of power in demographic terms: a falling birthrate in one generation would, it was argued, condemn a nation to military impotence in the next. A single invention, the machine gun, sufficed to demolish the argument.

Spanner in the robot's works

But the theme has recently surfaced in a novel guise. This time the capacity measured is industrial rather than military, and the yardstick applied is not the number of young men a country has available for military service, but the size of its robot workforce. A recent publication by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development is but the latest of several surveys to adopt this criterion, and it is perhaps no accident that being photographed next to a robot now seems a more potent political gesture than kissing a baby.

By any standards, whether absolute or relative, Britain is doing badly in the robot race. In 1982 British industry was able to muster a paltry 1.500 rebots compared with some 13,000 in Japan. This puts us roughly on a par with Sweden, with the difference that when the figure is related to the number of workers employed Britain had one robot for every 10,000 workers and the Swedes had 30 (1981 figures). Moreover, in the OECD's opinion, matters are unlikely to improve. If experience is anything to go by, it is the big robot makers (the US,Japan and Sweden, in that order) who will continue to be the leading robot users.

ut before accepting a lack of robots as yet another symp-tom of industrial malaise, it is worth pausing to try to discover whether industry is likely to be able to turn an unlimited supply of robots to our collective advantage any better than the generals of 1914-18 were able to extract the anticipated victories from the millions of young men who were put at their disposal. This involves some appreciation of what a robot actually is, what it can, and, more importantly, cannot, do, and of the chances of robots widening their repertoire of skills over the next decade or so.

Conditioned by science fiction, with its cast of walking, talking mechanical men, we all too easily leap to the conclusion that, if a machine is dubbed a "robot", it must have a range of abilities and an intelligence that approximate our own. In fact, as roboticists are well aware, attaching the label of robot to the kinds of manipulators that are currently in use is an expression of premature optimism rather than a statement of real accomplishment may wear the halo of high technology, but it came into being to meet a rather

During the nineteenth century, when mundane need. In the booming labour the use of mass armies became a market of the early 1960s it became realistic proposition, it became increasingly difficult to find people fashionable to assess the international willing to do boring, repetitive and unpleasant jobs. What was wanted was not a machine which could master elaborate human skills, but one which could provide the mindless lumpenproletariat demanded by mass production. As Joseph Engleberger, the founder of Unimation Inc. the pioneers of industrial robotics, put it: "...most manufacturers have broken down their processes into small elements. Each operator has to learn one sequence of operations, which he is then required to perform over and over again. The degree of skill is low and there is little

What had to be learnt, and proved well within the robot's capacity, were sequences of precise movement of the arm and hand ("end effector", in robotic parlance). Such sequences were relatively easily programmed into a computer memory, especially after the advent of the microprocessor freed robots from their dependence on the giant mainframe computers of the 1960s. But however impressive, even uncanny, a robot may appear to the layman as it repeats a series of movements with flawless precision, it is in fact operating blindly and by rote.

Even roboticists can be taken in by the illusion of intelligence. The story is told of a Japanese roboticist who demonstrated his machine to a group of British scientists. The audience were electrified by the fact that the robot was, apparently, able to lob a ball into a wastepaper basket with unerring accuracy - in robotic terms, a prodigous feat. The astonishment was short lived. Ingenuously, the roboticist explained that, having trained the robot to toss the ball, he then positioned the wastepaper basket to intercept it!

Repetitive manipulation is, of course, a skill common to many machines; what differentiates the robot is that it makes use of an articulated arm analogous to the human limb and that it can be reprogrammed to perform a whole variety of tasks without the need to redesign or adjust its mechanical components. There are, however, a limited range of applications in which a manipulator arm, operating blindly and without intelli-gence, is useful. Looking through manufacturers' catalogues one is struck not by the machines' versatility, but by the monotonous repetition of a sort of litany of robot functions: machine tool loading and unloading, spot welding, paint spraying and parts transfer being the commonest.

Whatever its task, a robot is dependent for its effectiveness upon a whole supporting cast of automated machines. Everything must be presented to it in consistent positions and The contemporary industrial robot, orientations; it can only operate in a in the eyes of politicians and others, world of guaranteed predictability. world of guaranteed predictability. when a new generation of automated equipment dispenses totally with from automation in general is rather anthropometic methods.

like studying an ant which has been removed from an anthill - it is an ingenious but purposeless curiosity. The need to provide an automated environment has so far restricted robot different items, have little incentive to set up the paraphernalia of conveyors, jigs and electronic communication which a robot requires. The robot's lack of intelligence also limits the use that can be made of its flexibility. It is, for example, perfectly possible to teach a machine to stack ensuring that parcels are of a consistent shape and size and that both pallet and parcels are predictably positoned. Moreover, the robot will have to be laboriously taught to put the first parcel in the far left hand corner of the pallet, the second next to it ... the tenth on top of the first, the eleventh on top of the second, and so on, hardly an effort to be undertaken in a factory where the kind of goods to be packed may vary from hour to hour.

Those who leap to the conclusion that the provision of more and more robots is a guaranteed elixir of industrial health should also be aware that there is a substantial body of opinion which argues that, rather than being the universal worker of the future, the robot is no more than a stop-gap expedient forced upon us by the limitations of insufficient and inadequate automation. Automation, the argument goes, achieves its really spectacular successes when it abandons the attempt to do things in ways based on human skills and find solutions that are quite novel and intrinsically mechanical Replacing wired circuits, which are fiddly for human beings and virtually impossible for machines to assemble, with printed circuits which machines can manufacture with ease is an obvious example. The need for robots arises, it is suggested, only because imperfect automation has left a number of gaps in the industrial scheme of things which require the particular skills of the human - or robot - hand. But this is a temporary state of affairs which will be remedied

The robot offers a sensible half-way parcels on a pallet, but this will involve house; it provides an economic (and relatively reliable) substitute for human labour while also having a degree of flexibility that is attractive. What has yet to be established is that robots have it in them to advance from the status of blind, preprogrammed serfs to that of a skilled and adaptive labour force, capable of learning new tricks and acting on their own initiative without the need for human tutelage at every stage.

In particular, hopes for the robot's survival as a distinctive species rest replace human labour in assembly work, an area of industry that has remained labour intensive and resistant to mechanization while being notoriously repetitive and "mechanical". Already robots have gained a toehold in assembly, especially in cases where products can be put together on the so-called "pancake" principle, which involves no more than placing one component on top of another and securing the whole assembly with a single screw. In the case of items which are to be mass produced it may well prove worthwhile to undertake the redesign of products in order to make them susceptible to robot methods. It is with applications like assembly in mind that many of the most recent additions to the robot menagerie have been designed specifically to replace, or work alongside, human workers, oc-cupying roughly the same space and having a similar radius of action; though, unlike a human being, the robot will require a good deal of hard automation to ensure that components are delivered in a predictable fashion. Another approach to the problem has been to incorporate the robot arm in a gainst this view are those who system which forms a self-contained microcosm, an area the size of a large tabletop on which everything is positioned with guaranteed accuracy so that the robot is sheltered from the bewildering complexity of the factory

But if robots are ever to become a mation ignore economic realities, truly adaptive, general purpose labour industry will not be able to afford the force, and if they are ever to work alongside human beings as "colleagues" rather than tools, they will have to acquire a visual faculty, an ability to communicate in natural language and a level of intelligence that at least approximate human eyesight, language use and common sense. The chances of any of these objectives being achieved within the near future has, until recently, hinged entirely upon the chances of the digital computer - the machine which provides the "brain" in all existing robots - mastering the kind of everyday routine intelligence which we, as human beings, take for granted. Unfortunately, though it is undeniable that computers can achieve a level of intelligence which far outstrips human beings in many respects, the signs are that they may not be able to master the more humdrum business of perceiving, understanding and coping with the real

This failure, if failure it proves, will have implications that go beyond the purely utilitarian. For one of the more interesting questions in robotics is whether, by coupling a computer brain to a mechanical body, we can ceate an artificial version of the continuum of mind and body which lies at the heart of our own sense of mystery about our identity as living beings. In the long term, the possibility that the robot might offer a valid and intelligible model of man the thinker may be just as significant as its ability to substitute for man the industrial worker.

Enjoying a cultural jet lag

Edinburgh

By the time I read this I shall be back from two weeks on the Edinburgh Fringe and starting to catch up on two weeks' loss of sleep - a trip to Edinburgh at Festival time provides the most extended form of cultural jet lag known to man, and perhaps the most enjoyable. It is an experi-ence which, rather like the Notting Hill carnival or going through Heathrow cannot adequately be described in words or conveyed to someone who has never done it.

One misconception should be cleared up though. We talk glibly about going to the Edinburgh Festival.
There is no such thing. There are only Edinburgh festivals. I don't just mean the division between the official Festival and the Fringe though I find to my surprise that I have been to nearly a hundred Fringe productions in the last ten years, but have never seen an official event. I mean that there are lots of festivals going on at the same time, which only intersect by accident.

There is the Film Festival for instance. There is a folk festival going on at the Aal Centre, which was not so called, as you might think to get first place in the alphabetical listing, but comes from an old Scottish word meaning old. Actually they only come second in the listings; first place went to a production called Accounted which probably comes from an old Scottish word for pub closing time.

There is also a roaring jazz festival sponsored by Dryborough's Beers, and it is nice for once to come across a sponsor whose product is inti-mately concerned with the cultural event in question. Dozens of bands. mostly trad, have been performing at dozens of pubs round the city and round the clock, turning the place in to a sort of Georgian style New Orleans.

The first group I caught was the Fred Hunt Trio backing Jim Galloway, a marvelous Scottish soprano saxopnonist now resident in Canada, and the rapt attention of the beerclutching crowd would have done credit to a mime show audience onthe Fringe. (More than credit, in fact. Mime performers this year have added a lot of sound to their acts. David Glass's highly significant show, or what you and I would call highly pretentious show, was one of est things on the F have even heard complaints that some cabarets are inaudible and some mimes are far too noisy, which is an interesting cultural develop-don't suppose that many jazz supporters have been to mime shows, or vice versa, nor that either of them have been to visit the Television Festival I asked one television visitor what was so festive about the Television Festival and he replied, quite honestly:

Nothing - it's just another conference. It's a chance to chat up people about jobs and it is also the one week in the year when we can get together and think about what we are meant to be doing in television." The honesty lies in the clear admission that during the other 51 weeks they do not think about that kind of thing in the years when I don't come to Edinburgh for the Festival or I should say festivals. I read about it from a distance and wonder what all the fuss is about. When I do come I wonder why life can't be like this all the time: a kind of perpetual high,

sideways look at the British way of life

More than a sneaking liking of cats began for me when my girlfriend's uncle, who was Something Big in Small Tools, tried to "master" her cat Tinker Bell: "You have to show them who's boss". said the small, fat man, "It's just a question of being firm." The cat, a Siamese, grossly misnamed and the only creature I have seen whose eyes could turn from china blue to dangerous red like Rikkitikki-tavi in Jungle Book, looked at him in haughty disbelief.

Tinker Bell had a defence policy just as robust as Kipling's mongoose and was once seen riding a startled labrador down the drive. She treated all humans as potential vivisectionists and no one legs giving beneath him and smelling like a drain.

outside the family could pick her up without gloves. As we were in Yorkshire, Uncle donned a handy pair of wicketkeeping gloves: "I'll show her not to dig up your lettuce", he said.

Such people hate rebels and all her life Tinker Bell was a crusader against the chintzy sentimental image of Felix Catus fostered by the pet food industry, and even gave the vet a nasty mp with toothless gums when he came to put her down at the age of 19. She represented, in South Yorkshire at least, a campaign for real cats.

Not all cats are as forthright and honest in the loathing they have for humans and most owners are completely conned by their wily feline. The cosy ginger tom lolls around a hearthside looking as if butter would not melt between his langs. But come nightfall Kittykins, or Pussywoo, or Twinklebottom, or whatever strange name his master calls him will be off through the cat flap embarked on a night of sex and violence which would have made Caligula blush. "Oh look, Kitty's been hunning again", they say when he returns in the morning, a glazed smile on his face,

Yet the country is going to the cats despite such antics. Nine million hirk in five million homes mistaken belief that they are less expensive than dogs and can "stand on their own two feet". Most cats would find this very amusing.

There is little reason where attitudes to cats are concerned and the world divides into cat lovers and cat haters, often violently. Was it merely coincidence that Churchill and Roosevelt in the last war liked kitties, while Hitler, Mussolini and Franco loathed them? Stalin of course was ambivalent, having had to munch his way through many a moggy in Siberia.

Cat lovers often cause havoc with their wills. The socialist mayor of San Roque, the nearest Spanish town to Gibraltar, is hopping mad he cannot buy the mansion of Mrs Diana Breton-Lee and turn it into a student centre. When she died in May she left it to her 24 cats and there is nothing he can do short of provoking another Falklands conflict. They are mostly British cars.

Those who hate cats can be just as dotty.

Wakefield Council actually banned an old lady

The poor officials had and the number, thanks to the grinning toms, is obviously been watching too much Tom and growing all the time. People buy cats in the Jerry. Or could it be they still believe all cats are really sorcerers in disguise?

The Royal Family has always loathed cats and there is not a single mouser below stairs at Buckingham Palace: but "staff are allowed private cats in the Royal Mews", a spokesperson pronounced. Any cat that took itself off up to London to see the Queen and found the Duke of Edinburgh in the gun room would probably end up on the wall. The only hope on the horizon is that Princess Michael of Kent is dotty about them. Queen Victoria installed a black pot cat on the Frogmore Mausoleum to keep owls away from Prince Albert.

If you want to stop the march of the cat, tiger dung spread on the geraniums, signifying the beast's territory, is the sure way. The trouble is you need to find a friendly tiger and it's probably safer to put up with moggy. Even Tinker Bell never ate

The colouration in these sorts of cats is due to an enzyme which is thermolabile. If they encounter low temperatures they turn dark all over, and it was a very cold winter. Cats are tremendously important in the human social chair and I know certain people who relate to their cats more than most other human beings. # Nacirema

The Anthropologist, Horace Milner, once produced a spoof report on modern America. It was called Body Ritual among the Nacirema (spell the last word backwards and you'll see the joke) and showed Americans to be a tribe of mystifying habits. No one knows this better than Miss Manners, alias Judith Martin, a widely syndicated adviser on eviquette who tries very hard to kick the "Nacirema" tribe into some kind of civilized shape.

Most of the tribe's enquette problems are self-imposed. Take, for nstance, the muddle which results from calling every eldest son after his father. Since Americans are a hardy bunch, four men, identically labelled, may be going about their business at the same time. To avoid opening each other's mail, they are forced to add Senior, Junior, 3rd and 4th to their names until one of them dies and they all move up a notch, causing a crinimal waste of personalized writing paper. Do they ask Miss Manners how they can best end the whole idiotic system by naming the next first-born son after a distant cousin? They do not. What worries them is whether the personalized writing paper should be headed John Smith 2nd or John Smith I. (By the way, Miss Manners thinks the cither is acceptable.)

At meal times, they make things difficult for themselves by chasing their food all around the plate with a fork instead of gently guiding it towards the tines with a knife. They spread sandwiches so thickly that they have to be held together with toothpicks and are impossible to eat without harpooning the upper lip. Perhaps the reason they over-ice their drinks is to anaesthesize injuries caused by an inadvertent sandwich.

Although eating and drinking is such an uncomfortable process, Americans demand, and get, non-stop refreshment. Thoroughly spoilt by being offered both coffee and doughnuts during a business meeting, one of Miss Manners's readers complained about the lack of tea. Miss Manners considered the complaint reasonable. Miss Manners is at her most censorious regarding her clients' verbal customs. She has her work cut out here because, unlike more developed tribes who merely make a little conversation from time to time. Americans communicate. Miss Manners takes a sharp line with people who say: "I've been on a wonderful journey of selfdiscovery lately, and I'd like to share it with you". She takes an even sharper one with those who invite their friends to "partake in a ritual celebration the congruence of their lives". She advises her readers that the proper word for curtains is curtains and not drapes, but allows them to say vase rather than vahz, which shows that she sometimes allows her heart to overrule her bead. All-American sentimentality means poor Miss Manners must sort out behavioural problems which, with luck, will never reach our own shores. One such concerns the high school graduation. In this country, as we all know, the correct way to become a school-leaver is to slink through the gates on the last day of the last term. avoiding embarrassing farewell ceremonies with those teachers lives you have made hellish for the past six

You then, with a loud cry of 'yippee', throw your school tie under the wheels of an oncoming bus. You are then considered ready for the big wide world. This is not enough for Americans who insist on ceremony, invitations, presents, dances and silly clothes at every turn. The mere fact that they have a child who has become too old to stay on at school any longer lets them in for all sorts of arguments over who is to be invited where and with whom; arguments which we wisely defer until out child gets married.

Americans have a primitive need to celebrate, even when the event in question lends itself more properly to quiet contemplation. I do not feel that people about to get married for the impleenth time should be seeking Miss Manners's advice about what they should wear on their latest wedding day. Rather, they should spend their every waking hour soberly asking themselves whether husband number eight can succeed in giving everlasting love when husbands number one to seven have failed. If a wedding still seems like a sensible arrangement, it should take place without flower girls or fancy gloves.

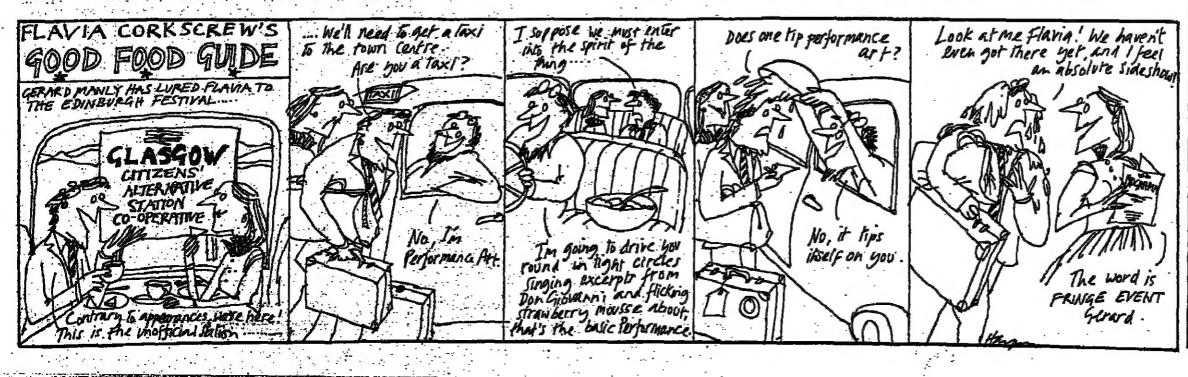

Since we British have too much sense to partake in wedding showers or embroider initials on our face flannels or eat our salad before our meat, there s very linle that Miss Manners can teach us that we really need to know. Even so, the English publishing house of Hamish Hamilton is publishing Miss Manners's Guide to Exerciatingly Correct Behaviour* in its original American format. As a guide to correct behaviour it's useless, but as an anthropological study of George Washington's people, it's unputdown

The Amate Press of Oxford. Greene recounts how he enlisted Fox's help in the 1950s to assist a young Chinese whose wife had been refused a visa to live with him in Singapore. Greene writes: "I telephoned at once to Father Fox. Will you come with me in the morning and storm the police station? He took the request as calmly and naturally as if it had been an invitation to lunch. This is Esperanto Week and to celebrate the Esperanto Parliamentary Group, which claims to be the largest non-political lobby at Westminster, cries "Fil" on 78 MPs blacklisted because they are opposed to the use of an international language. "Fil" is Esperanto for "Shame!" and more likely to be adopted. I should say, than is "Eksigu!" as a substitute for "Resign!" or "Sensencajo!" for "Rubbish." The Esperanto Group counts on the support of 122 MPs from five parties, but the 78 who are said 30 think it is all "freneza" (bonkers) include. I note, Edward Heath. Those who have heard him speak French may wonder why.

Late on Saturday afternoon a colleague telephoned the information service at Paddington for news of the Irish boattrain from Fishguard, "Sorry, we can't tell you anything", he was told. "We have heard rumours that it may be four of five hours late, but we suggest you ring Fishguard." He did so and after listening to announcements about because of bad weather the ferry from Rosslare had been cancelled eight hours earlier. When he relayed the news to Paddington, the grateful supervisor said: "I know we're supposed to be an information service. but no one ever tells us anything".

The sherut has come to London. In case you do not know. I should explain that a sherut is a shared taxi plying a fixed route, such as operates in Jerusalem and other cities. A north London firm now advertises a sheru to and from Heathrow from £7.50, and to and from Luton airport from £10, am assured, though, that its drivers do not follow the foreign custom of going along holding their fingers up to show how many places they still have to fill. In this country that could be misconstrued when there are just a couple of seats remaining.

A Hertz executive has found reassuring evidence that his firm is No. 1 and Avis No. 2. It was standing in the Avis line at Heathrow. Several of the Avis cars looked familiar, and checking their registrations he found the Talbot Sambas had done their time in the Hertz fleet from December 1982 to June 1983. Hertz keep cars of that type only six months. I put the evidence to Avis who must be trying harder to come up with something to say, because that was a week ago.

Sir Peter Parker, who leaves BR this week, talks to Peter Hennessy

The sage of the train

Listening to Sir Peter Parker. probably the most articulate nationalized industry chairman in the history of public enterprise, brings to mind George Orwell's description of England as "a family with the wrong members in control".

Why isn't he in politics? Sir Peter leaves British Rail at the end of the week to be succeeded by his chief executive, Mr Bob Reid. Instead of grappling with what he regards as the most romantic of British industries (though not in the sentimental smoke-in-the-sky sense) for seven years, why was he not giving Margaret Thatcher a run for her money at the despatch

"In theory I'm as apolitical as an amoeba", he said in a valedictory interview at BR's Euston headquarters. Then he proceeded to say what he would have done if he had been Prime Minister during the great 1973-74 industrial crisis: he would have set up an emergency council of industry to end the muddle of backstairs deals among unions, employers and government, an idea he refloated in March in his Dimbleby Lecture, Missing Our Connections, and which he will continue to pursue as chairman of Rockware and an active member at the British Institute of Management.

Sir Peter clearly cannot abide Thatcherism. He is well known in the public sector as one of her most severe critics. His Dimbleby Lecture was a striking cri de coeur against the prevailing orthodoxy. But though almost free of public office, he would not be drawn beyond an admission that it was "certainly a cri de coeur for values which do not seem at the moment to be centre stage".

His Dimbleby Lecture was an eloquent reprise of a view consistently held over 20 years. But it did not dent the shell of Thatcherism. For the hard men and women of the 1980s it could be written off, as Professor Ralf Dahrendorf once dismissed social democracy, as "promising a better yesterday".

Thatcherites regard Sir Peter as a bit of a beached whale. stranded by the receding tide of corporatism. Though he loathes the corporatist label, calling it "boring", he is an unrepentant believer in Neddy – the National Economic Development Organisation - the forum for tripartite discussions between capital, abour and government.

In its 22-year life, Neddy has never been given a chance. Just because Leonardo da Vinci the savagery has slowly emerged it has

The analogy needs to be put in context. The Magdalena Medio region, which takes in large areas of three

Sir Peter recognizes the need for austerity and knows that the world does not owe Britain a living. His critique of Thatcher-ism embraces the long term:
"There is a crisis, of people feeling not wanted in our society. This is going to be a huge problem, it needs voice. At the moment, we are accepting it, biting on the bullet to internationally competitive." On a lower level, he is best value-for-money railway in the world.

Ironically for one who talks unashamedly about the "railway community", he may be best remembered for his time at BR as the man who bashed the unions, who bought productivity at the price of confrontation. But could the British Railways board have won that battle without the prevailing climate of Thatcherism and the new industrial realism it has brought?

Sir Peter rejected that thesis vehemently. The board's board's efficiency strategy had its origins before the 1979 general election. He did not need the Government to stiffen him during last year's union militancy. He had not met Mrs Thatcher once during the struggle. No minister had given him instructions: "It is easier to have a strike than to manage change without a strike. Once you get a strike, it's very crude.

Sir Peter said his failures on the railway outnumbered the successes. His greatest was that change had not come faster. "Hitting the buffers of the recession" had made matters difficult and caused projects like electrification and the Channel tunnel to be shelved.

Among the successes, which he insisted were the board's not his, he listed productivity gains -200 employees a week were leaving the railway and taxpayers were being saved £250m a year, a close relationship with that British Rail should be the Department of Transport; airborne, he said. into constituent businesses and bringing them closer to their markets; the realization throughout the railway community that they were not a monopoly and that they "had better sell with a smile".

Sir Peter was flummoxed only once during the conversation when he was asked, who was the real Peter Parker? He's been described as a great actor, oldfashioned corporatist, inspirational leader, waffling wordsmith, and naive romantic who was mortified to find that not everyone shared his view of the railway as a family during the 1982 strikes.

He was furious at the suggestion that he was an actor playing a role (he has not trod the boards since he played Lear in New York in 1950). He certainly did not regard himself as a soft-centred manager devoted to the old ways. He had left the Labour Party more than 10 years ago because it never talked about efficiency and productivity.

How then would he like the obituarists to mark his passing? "I'd like to be remembered as a man who thought efficiency and happiness were reconcilable, as a man who noticed those he depended on and worked with".

The obituarists are likely to be tougher than that. Sir Peter is writing his memoirs, but perhaps the last chapter has yet to be written. Parker-watchers see him as natural SDP material. Maybe post-Thatcher Britain will provide a test-bed for his theories. Maybe they will, and prove, after As the TUC

Latin America's most denselypopulated country - has a population of 4.5 million. No. it is not a tiny El Salvador." says Colombian novelist Gabriel Garcia Marquez, the 1982 Nobel literature laureate. "but rather another, much bigger than that of Central America, and even worse, being more confused and forgotten."

What alarms many Colombians is that the violence engulfing the region is all too reminiscent of the civil strife, aptly known as "la violencia", which convulsed the country after the 1948 assassination of a populist Liberal Party leader. It took ten years and a rare intervention by the military until la riolencia, an undeclared civil war between Liberals and Conservatives, finally blew itself out. Nobody has ever put an exact figure on it, but estimates of the number killed start at 300,000 and range as high as 450,000.

La violencia did not touch the cities. in a country twice the size of France or large enough to swallow up Texas and California, it was several years before the extent of the senseless blood-letting was fully appreciated. Similarly today it has taken months for the full horror of what is happening in Magdalena Medio, only four hours by road from Bogota, to be understood in the capital.

Magdalena Medio was among the regions which suffered

One day a band of heavily-armed strangers drove into his village in Jeeps and handed out crudely-written cards, accusing the inhabitants of being communists and giving them 24 hours to clear out. They got out fast, since a few miles away they had heard how all the menfolk in one hamlet had been shot after rejecting a similar

For some 20 years communist guerrillas of the Colombian Revolutionary Armed Forces (Spanish initials FARC), the country's oldest subversive group, have been active in the Magdalena Medio, justifying their actions as being in defence of the region's campesinos. At the same time. they have regularly kidnapped wealthy iandowners, whose freedom has been secured only after huge ransom payments, while also receiving protection money from other landowners as an insurance against kidnapping, cattle rustling, or the destruction of crops.

It seems that now the landowners are striking back with a vengeance. Worse, they have hired members of a much-feared right-wing assassination squad financed by "Colombian connection" drug racketeers in second city Medellin to do the dirty work.

This virtual private army has been staging a "clean-up" operation in Magdalena Medio and now claims there is not an Izquierdista (leftist) in the region. Several Communist Party officials and members of a Maois revolution party, which rejects the armed struggle and to which President Belisario Betancur's son belongs, have been murdered. But most of the victims are the innocent.

In the region's main town, Puerto Berrio, population 25,000, the schools have been closed because all the teachers, automatically suspected of leftist sympathies, have fled. In the past seven months 150 "undesirables". - supposed leftists, pickpockets and homosexuals - have been murdered in the river port town where Justic Minister Rodrigo Lara Bonilla recently declared: "A democratic state cannot tolerate citizens taking justice into their own hands." of "hot money" The drug trade and the death squad are both the subject of government inquiries and Betancur is expected to militarize Magdalena Medio later this week. Ironically, Betancur has been the driving force behind the efforts of the Contadora group - Colombia, Mexico, Panama and Venezuela - to achieve peace in El Salvador and elsewhere in Central America.

As a sympathetic Garcia Marquez notes: "It would not be just if after so many efforts to achieve peace in E Salvador... he could not manage it in this internal El Salvador which is devouring our very entrails."

Venice, the first cultural ghetto

Wonderful city, streets full of water, please advise. It would be grand to go to Venice, now that the flocks of summer tourists are dwindling. But since we cannot afford the time and money for that, let us console ourselves and sharpen our nostalgia by reminding ourselves of Venice's linguistic gifts to the world.

Lagoon, of course, where, in the midst of the waters, free, indigent, micsi of the waters, free, indigent, laborious, and inaccessible, they gradually coalesced into a republic. Gondola, derived from a word meaning "to rock"; Shelley compared "gondolas", disturbingly, to moths of which a coffin might have been the chrysalis. And the Lido: "The ground which Byron used to ride on, And do I don't know what beside on." don't know what beside on."

Arsenal is a Venetian invention, and was for several centuries the largest naval dockyard in the world. The conveyor belt system was invented at the Venetian Arsenal. The ships, when New words for old/Philip Howard completed, were towed past the windows of the storehouses, ten at a time, stores and equipment being added at each point until by the time they reached the end of the dock, they were ready to sail. Peter Mundy visited it more than four-and-a-half centuries ago: "I went with a friend to see the famous Arsenal, a place of about two miles in compass, walled round, having but one entrance for a Galley to go in or out, there being within water for two or three hundred to ride afloat."

The ghetto is a Venetian word. Venetians always got on with Jews, and welcomed them aboard. At first the Jews lived on the Giudecca, having probably given it their name: The Getta, from gettare, "to cast", was until the beginning of the sixteenth century the place where Venetians cast their shot. In 1517 they moved their Getto, and handed its old site over to Getto. and handed its old site over to the Jews. In course of time it became the Ghetto, and its name spread around the world. Venetians find it as bizarre that there should be ghettos. say, in Poland, as that there should be a Lido in Hyde Park.

The casino, in which loonies lose their money, is a Venetian invention, it means "a little house", the diminutive of casa, and it originally came into English to mean a public room for social meetings, with room for social meetings, with socialites being socialites, the distinct probability of a little flutter. The sequin, which ball-room dancers apparently stitch in thousands onto their ballooning dresses, is derived from the Venetian gold coin called a serchino. The gazette, a somewhat oldfashioned name for a news-sheet, though it survives in certain names of publications and in gazateer, comes from the gazeta, a smaller and less valuable Venetian coin. The original source was the Venetian phrase una gazeta de la novità, as it were "a ha porth of news", because the news sheet was sold for a gazeta.

You may not be able to go to Venice this year. But you cannot get away from her in the language. Of course, not everybody shares our admiration for Venice. "Old and in general ill built houses, ruined pictures, and stinking ditches dignified with the pompous denomination of Canals; a fine built bridge, spoilt by two Rows of houses upon it, and a large square decorated with the worst Architecture I ever yet saw, such are the colours I should employ in my portrait of Venice." Edward Gibbon, shame on you, Sir. A word in Your Ear, by Philip Howard has just been published by Hamish Hamilton, £7.50.

Concorde: slowing, but the idea could still take off

jet, the big civil aviation story of the week was British Airways' use of Concorde as a crowd-puller in its war of the shuttle routes with British Midland. This degradation of Concorde to a sideshow attraction - the equivalent of using a Derby winner to carry Lady Godiva at a county fete -marks the latest stage in the collapse of the high hopes once vested in the aircraft.

Concorde was conceived more than 20 years ago as the plane of the future. the prodigy that would whizz passen-gers around the world at more than twice the speed of sound. Yet in late 1983 there are only 12 Concordes in use, operated by two national airlines which were captive clients. Air France were captive clients. Air France, once highly ambitious in its use of Concorde, has abandoned its service from Paris to Washington, Rio de Janeiro, Caracas and Mexico City, and now flies only to New York. British Airways includes Washington as well as New York on its scheduled timetables, but has scrapped the Bahrain route.

Though others expressed interest, only one other operator. Singapore Airlines; was ever involved in a Concorde service (jointly with British Airways), but flights to Singapore ended in 1980, less than two years after they began. While BA and Air France both claim that their surviving Concorde services are profitable, the alleged surpluses seem more the products of creative accountancy than net financial gains for the two airlines, saddled as they are with expensive, gas-guz-zling planes that they would far rather be without. Yet C incorde remains the most glamorous commercial aircraft in the world. It is still gazed at with fascination wherever it goes, popular for joy-ride charters even when it is orevented from flying supersonically.

On one occasion when I travelled on the plane one of my fellow-passengers was an American astronaut who had actually walked on the moon, yet he was starry-eyed at being allowed to visit Concorde's flight-deck. The trouble dogging Concorde throughout its history is that although it was conceived ahead of its time, it was out of date when it was finally brought into service. The plane took far longer to develop than planned. Intended to enter service in 1969, it did not make its maiden commercial flight until January 1976. At the time it was concrived it suited the commercial circumstances of the day. When at last it began carrying fare-paying passengers it was too noisy (though no noisier than its contemporaries, as I was able to demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Coleman Hearing in Washington in 1976), too small and its range was far too limited. Instead of being able to carry hundreds of passengers to Japan or Australia, it could barely make it across the Atlantic with a payload of 100.

Atlantic with a payload of 100.

By demonstrating that passengers could be carried supersonically. Concorde was a dazzling and unique technical success. TU 144, the Russian counterpart, crashed humiliatingly at the 1973 Paris Air Show, and when last heard of had been relegated to carrying freight. Yet Concorde is undeniably an abject commercial failure. Production coased long ago - indeed it was I who put a stop to it. When I asked my colleagues in the Labour government to allow an inexpensive study for a new supersonic airliner, they turned

I believe this was one of the few mistaken decisions made by that Labour government. There is a widel; accepted view that the unsuccessful Concorde experiment rules out com-mercial supersonic flight. My own opinion is that supersonic flight. aving been invented, not only cannot be disinvented but ought not to be disinvented. This summer I have flown many thousands of miles, across the Atlantic and across continents. As I have struggled off the 747 or DC10 dirty, tired and jet-lagged. I have longed for the speed and convenience of Concorde. Countless other bedraggled, weary passengers would probably value it just as much.

All the requirements of a new generation supersonic airliner - greater size, greater range, quieter engine - are attainable; only the effort and determination to put them together are determine the feasibility of the project. That is why I believe that all the main western countries - the United States. Japan and West Germany as well as France and Britain - should unite to finance the necessary study.

Anyone who wants to have a look at a Concorde can see a prototype at the aircraft museum at Yeovilton. Supersonic flight, however, is too important and too potentially beneficial to be relegated to a museum, or to stunts like huckstering the Glasgow shuttle. # The bungling burglar and the TUC conference in Blackpool this week, what is their mood and where do they think their movement is going? Many, perhaps most, will be wholly occupied with the forthcoming battles between right and left, and the bartering and counting of block votes in the Labour party leadership and deputy leadership elections. Others will be preoccupied with devising careful and suitably ambiguous wording to enable the conference to edge its way round several dangerous corners and stay in

But I hope that at least a few are filled with a bitter sadness: sadness that their great movement should have sunk to its present weakened state. the tales of striking gravediggers and rule-book officiousness have been squeezed dry for every drop of antiunion sentiment they are worth, it is or at least has been - a great movement, with the proud history of courage and unsung heroes in the fight

This year - of all years, with growing poverty. threats to living standards. floundering businesses on all sides— the conference is forced to spend its time reviewing its own constitutional arrangements and political relation-ships. There will also be many discussions about discussions. Should we talk to Tebbit or not? Should we even discuss the proposals for trade union democracy? Can there be any hint or whisper of change in our relationship with the Labour Party?

Probably, as before, discussion will be dominated by defensiveness, conservatism (with a small "c") and bitter in-fighting. Let us hope, however, that this might be the beginning of a constructive exercise in self-analysis, and not just a repeat of the old, failed self-justifications.

Norman Tebbit will certainly follow the conference as avidly as everyone. He is playing an interesting game with the unions. The original policy of the 1979 Conservative administration was a straightforward union-bashing one. It landed them with an Act curtailing union powers which may be acceptable to public opinion in theory, but which could be a severe embarrassment to the Government if put to the test. Mr Tebbit seems to have turned hus back on that approach, and switched to a wholly different approach, saying that what is wrong with the unions is not their powers but their lack of internal accountability. "Give the unions back to their members," he has cried. The public may have been startled at the implication - from a Conservative minister - that the unions were a possession worth having in anybody's hands, and sceptical about this sudden zeal for democracy.

What probably only a few people have realized is that the proposals ringing slogan and all, are an act of unblushing plagiarism from the SDP's 1982 Green and White Papers on trade union reform. But like a bungling burgler, stealing only half a custom-built stereo set. Mr Tebbit left behind those parts of the proposals that would have provided a convincing balance.

He has nothing to suggest about industrial democracy, strengthening union efficiency, bringing in sensible recognition, breaking down class barriers between white-and blue-collar workers. And, to their shame and discredit, the TUC has little to say on these subjects either

But now there has been a further strange, development in Mr Tebbit's strategy. Whereas the Government's Green Paper proposed a democratic reform of union structures which, unbalanced though it was, was direct and radical - postal balloting for all union executives and general sec-retaries, and the replacement of "contracting out" with "contracting in" to the political levy – the White Paper that now follows is inexplicably fudged. The postal ballot has gone. non-voting general secretaries are no longer to be subject to democratic procedures, and the political levy is to be discussed.

What has softened the flint-like Secretary of State for Employment? Can it be that the shafts of the New Socialist editor Mr James Curran, who pointed out that the sort of internal democracy Mr Tebbit is forcing on the unions is far from being practised by the Conservative Party, have gone home? Or has some secret deal been struck, whereby the Government would only press such reforms as would leave the present union office-holders in secure present an entire the present and holders in secure possession?

Tempting though these explanations are, there is another more plausible one. It may have finally occurred to Mr Tebbit that a really thoroughgoing reform of the unions - one that unshackled them from the dying Labour Party and gave them leaders with a true popular mandate - might actually produce a union movement that was more popular, capable, and threatening to the Conservative view of the world than the present TUC. It might actually start demanding action on that package of proposals Mr Tebbit left behind when he plundered the SDP policy in the SDP policy. the SDP policy papers.

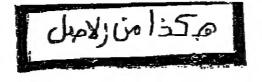

Are there any delegates at Blackpool

Are there any delegates at Blackpool dreaming of what might have been? Of what would happen if the TUC were, by a miracle, to say to Norman Tebbit: "Yes, of course we welcome more democracy. If you'll pay, we'll certainly have secret postal ballots for our executive elections. And we won't quarrel about the political layer let're quarrel about the political levy; let's change to contracting in if it is going to be such an issue. That's agreed! But now for the rest of the agenda: What now for the rest of the agenda: What about some real industrial democracy—from the employers as well as the unions? What about even-handed restrictions on company political donations? What about practical government help to strengthen union structures and organization?"

Imagine the effect. The ground cut from under Mr Tebbit's feet, the need for some quick defensive thinking in the CBI and the Conservative Party, the CBI and the Conservative Party, and - most important - an immediate improvement in the unions' public image. And it is about time. They have made it too easy for too long for the Government to lay all the blame for the country's parious economic state at the feet of the workers.

BE FIRM, BE SCEPTICAL

week's criminal destruction of a South Korean airliner by Soviet fighters, it must take the form of a clearer understanding in the West of the nature of the Soviet system. This callous regime, which shoots first and asks questions afterwards, has served a timely reminder on the members of the Atlantic Alliance that if they do not hang together they may be hanged separately.

That is not a reason for abandoning the talks on Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces (INF), which are about to resume in Geneva. It is a reason for approaching them with firmness, and for examining every Soviet proposal with caution, not to say scepticism.

The lastest public intervention by Mr Andropov is more in the nature of a clarification than a new proposal. He was already on record as offering to reduce the Soviet panoply of intermediate missiles in Europe to parity with the existing 162 British and French missiles, if the United States would agree to abandon completely its proposed deployment of cruise missiles and

Pershing 2s. One of the things Nato did not like about that proposal was that it did not make clear what would happen to the Soviet missiles once removed. Little would be gained if they were deployed against other allies of the United States in Asia, or simply re-moved behind the Urals ready to be redeployed at a moment's

Mr Andropov has removed that objection by promising that all Soviet missiles withdrawn under a new treaty would be destroyed. So far so good, but that does not remove the other not parity at all. But that is what Mr Andropov is still proposing, and he is still threatening that the introduction of any American weapons at all will compel Moscow to take appropriate counter measures".

It is this more negative aspect of his Pravda interview which has plunged Washington-intogloom and caused many to write off the concession on "liquidating" SS20s as a throw away line for public consumption. As the Russians still insist on concessions which they know to be unattainable the conclusion must be, it is said, that they are not particularly concerned whether they reach an agreement or not.

These who have been close to the negotiations argue that the Russians have become more, not less, intransigent since Mr Andropov's accession. He is now being blamed even for the collapse of the Walk in the Woods" formula worked out by the chief American and Soviet negotiators. It was Mr Brezhnev who inspired the initiative but his successor, working behind the scenes, who killed it off.

the Soviet Union will wait until deployment of the Pershing 2 and Cruise missiles has begun in December and will then renew its call for a moratorium. Some of Nato's less committed members might then echo the call, arguing that the Alliance had fulfilled the broad objective of its 1979 decision by stationing new

As as result Nato would be left with a huge INF imbalance and

That sort of wavering must be resisted. In fact, while failure to secure an agreement on the "zero option" (no Soviet and no American intermediate missiles in Europe) would be regrettable, it will not be an unmitigated disaster. That proposal was a concession by the West, and if the Russians persist in turning it down they will in one sense be doing us a favour, since there is an argument for stationing the new American missiles in Europe whether or not the SS20s are there to fill a gap in the spectrum of Western deterrence and to make absolutely unmistakable the American determination to defend Western Europe against Soviet attack.

Of course it would be preferable to avoid the deployment of such weapons on both sides, since both already have the capacity to destroy each other's population many times over with strategic weapons. But a continuing arms race with all its dangers is better than accepting an imbalance which would leave us at the mercy of the coldblooded murderers of Sakhalin.

We need not yet give up hope The great: Western fear is that of an agreement: the Americana are still waiting for a more detailed Soviet reply to their "interim" proposals, and meanwhile are reviewing a possible new initiative of their own. But realism obliges one to admit that there is as yet no sign of a breakthrough, and to prepare to face the consequences without

INDIGESTIBLE ISLAM

Last week immigration policy was at the centre of political debate in both France and West Germany. The French left-wing Government announced tough measures against illegal immigrants, while in West Berlin the suicide of a Turkish would-be immigrant led to calls for the resignation of the right-wing federal interior minister, Herr

The immediate issue in the West German case-is one of political asylum versus extradition. The protagonist in the case. Mr Kemal Altun, had asked for asylum, and the relevant office of the federal government had decided to grant it, but Herr Zimmermann had challenged this decision, arguing that Mr Altun, regarded by the Turkish Government as a terrorist, should be deported to Turkey "in the interests of good cooperation with Turkey in the field of police-work".

That argument is not necessarily disingenuous. Both Turkey. and West Germany have, or .. have had, a terrorist problem and it is on the face of it reasonable that they should wish to cooperate in the anti-terrorist struggle. The trouble is that the Turkish Government has a very much broader definition of a "terrorist" than any West Euro-pean country, and at present allows much less political freedom, so that the distinction between "terrorist" and bona fide political refugee from Turkey is not always easy to draw.

No doubt the West German police are glad of help from their Turkish colleagues in keeping an eye on potential Turkish terrorists in West Germany, but it is probable that Herr Zimmermann attaches more importance to Turkish cooperation in attempts to limit Turkish immigration to West Germany than he does to cooperation in policework proper. Moreover, his desire to restrict the right of asylum in West Germany stems largely from the fact that this right has in the past been ment is now trying to round up extensively abused by immi- and deport. grants whose real motives are cconomic - though this was talist Islamic groups suppressed certainly not the case with Mr by their home governments, are:

The measures announced in Paris on Wednesday, file Herr in July, are directed primarily to securing the cooperation of countries of origin - in the French case Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia - in preventing illegal immigration. The French Government has also accepted. albeit reluctantly, the established West German practice of ran-dom and frequent identity checks on immigrants, leading to the summary expulsion of these whose mapers are not in order. Inevitably such checks are inflicted mainly on those who look foreign, and thus contribute to the legal immigrant community's already acute sense of being a persecuted minority.

France is a country with a long tradition of successfully absorbing immigrants. Germany is not, but has come to terms reasonably well with the Italian, Spanish and Greek communities now living in its midst. In both countries, it is the presence of a massive community of Islamic culture which is proving particularly indigestible. Frankly racist attitudes are becoming almost the norm towards Turks east of the Rhine, and towards Arabs (essentially North Africans) west

In West Germany there are 4.7 million "foreigners" - more than seven per cent of the population - of whom 1.7 million are of Turkish origin. In France there are 4.5 million foreigners (over eight per cent); and an estimated 2.6 million people, roughly one million of them French citizens, are "persons of North African culture", not including the clandestine immigrants whom the Govern-

Should the liberal Western state insist on dealing only with individual citizens. freeing them from the tyranny of guild or sect (Rousseau), or should it recognize and cherish organic sub-loyalties and particularist identities as necessary components of a free society (Burke, Tocqueville)? To put it another way, where should one's respect for the traditional culture of an immigrant community stop? Short of tolerating female circumcision or polygamy, most of us would say; but beyond perhaps, arranging shifts and holidays so that pious Muslim workers can say their prayers at the correct time, and go on the hai. In between are vast grey areas: enforcing sexual segreeation in state schools, putting up with nightly revels next door during Ramadan, withholding French or German literacy classes from women whose husbands object, and so on. Most of these problems are familiar to us in Britain. All the major West European countries owe their postwar prosperity in part to immigrant labour, and none of them is actually prepared to do without foreigners in many jobs even in these times of recession. All have to accept that their "guestworkers" are mostly here to stay, and for a time at least will increase proportionally to the rest of society, thanks to a higher birthrate partly related to that indigestible cultural identity, but in large part due to an age structure which also makes the immigrant population a net contributor to the French social security system. (Those past working and child-bearing are left at home.) All West European peoples are bound to try to prevent more immigrants from coming in. All have not just a duty but an obvious interest to treat those already here with humanity and respect. A compromise between found. But it will take time.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Call for a new building structure

From Professor A. Kennaway Sir, You report today (August 29) on yet another series of building failures, this time apparently caused by corrosion of the reinforcement in

In spite of decades of education of architects, civil and structural engineers and of myriads of other specialists and also of dedicated efforts to improve and set standards. buildings continue to exhibit faults of a serious nature. Many are apparent with traditional materials and methods. The use of modern materials is also a source of hazard, especially when misused.

Perhaps the very existence of fragmented education, institutions and organisation of the industry contributes to these faults, many of which are due to failure to understand the behaviour of matcrials and components in the environment of application as well as of their interaction.

Should we not reconsider an old ides of educating architects and all engineers and technologists destined for the construction industry together? Perhaps, too, some of the professional institutions could merge?

The practice of the industry could take more steps toward a unified operation. Subcontractors need more competent, educated people, to work together more closely and to be integrated well. The best results are produced by integrated contrac-tors with every discipline in their employ and which are run by good project managers.

Few architects are good at project management; that needs to be taught explicitly, not left to be picked up snyhow.

Yours faithfully, A. KENNAWAY, Professor, Imperial College of Science and Technology. Department of Mechanical Engineering. Exhibition Road, SW7. August 29.

The Soviet challenge

From Mr Michael Cullis Sir, George Ignatieff's letter of August 25 makes it seem longer than 20 years since he was Canadian representative to Nato.

While he is, of course, right enough in urging increased Russian studies in Western universities, why should it apparently be assumed that these must lead to greater sympathy and cooperation with the Soviet regime?

As to what he mildly describes as the problem of nationalist feelings among Soviet ethnic minorities", how does he see Western "cooperation" conducing to resolve this?

The simple, and ultimately sole, answer is for the Soviet Union to give nations like the Baltic states back their liberty. Mr Ignatieff also seems to misinterpret the kind of cooperation envisaged in the Nato "Wise Men" exercise of a quarter of a century ago, which was concerned to promote non-military cooperation between members of the Alliance, not with the Soviet

It may indeed be that Mr Ignatieff is only seeking to make similar points to Lord Carrington in his admirable Nato Review article (summarised in your issue of August 29) but, if so, he has introduced a certain confusion into the argument.

Yours etc. MICHAEL CULLIS, County End. Bushey Heath's Hertfordshire. August 29.

Grey area' of power

inforces an "us-and-them" men-tality. "Us" are the forces of law and From Mr Paul S. Bazshaw Sir, Peter Hennessy's article (August 30), misleadingly entitled "Order without armed force", reports Sir order and "them" are not simply criminals and subversives, but all those who do not agree with "us". Edwin Bramall's views on military aid to the civil power. With better who may approach problems from a different perspective. It is no training and equipment since the 1981 riots the police have, he feels, effectively filled the "grey area" before the army are called out. Yet the true "grey area" is not here but in the overlap of the police Northern Ireland), the increased arming and technical sophistication of the police have widened this support.

Finally, the US bishops (1) rule

Sir. Clifford Longley ("US bishops enter the bomb' debate", August 29) is surely right to welcome the pastoral letter of the US Roman Catholic bishops. "The Challenge of Peace: God's Promise and our Response", as "impressive and, in its own context, likely to be epochmaking". Moreover, this is, as he points out, largely because it was publicly debated and thrice revised before being issued in final form.

By contrast, The Church and the Bomb was indeed just one input to a wider public debate to which other churches in this country have also contributed. It would be a help to many Christians if, on the basis of the work already done (including the American statement) and of the discussion evoked, a shorter agreed ecumenical document could be produced by all the British churches concerned.

Your readers may, however, be misled by Mr Longley's article on two central issues. First, he makes no mention of the crucial recommendation by the US bishops (para 204) of "negotiations to halt the testing, production and deployment of new nuclear weapons systems" - in other words, a bilateral or multilateral "freeze". This is, in fact, the objective on which the peace movement in this country has united and which enjoys wide support in the USA. A comprehensive test ban treaty was one of the recommendations of The Church and the Bomb.

Secondly, the US bishops do commend "carefully chosen limited steps" in unilateral disarmament, "seeking to elicit a comparable step from the Soviet Union" (para 205). This again is precisely the philosophy of The Church and the Bomb, though our proposals for such unilateral steps were more radical out all use of nuclear weapons against population centres (paras 147-8); (2) reject any "first use" 147-8); (2) reject any "first use" (paras 150-156); and (3) express profound scepticism about the possibility of "limited" nuclear exchange (paras 157-161). They conclude that "the first imperative is to prevent any use of nuclear

It is against this background that their acceptance of deterrence is to be evaluated. Their position is clear (paras 173-176). It is that of Pope John Paul II given in two pro-nouncements last year: "deterrence based on balance, certainly not as an end in itself but as a step on the way nowards a progressive disammament may still be judged morally accept-able;" and "the logic of nuclear deterrence cannot be considered a final goal or an appropriate and secure means for safeguarding international peace."

The message of the US bishops and that of The Church and the Bomb are basically one and the same. The use of nuclear weapons is morally unacceptable. These weapons must go. "Deterrence" is justifiable but only as a temporary holding operation on the way to disarmament. (To say that The Church and the Bomb declared all nuclear deterrence "forbidden" in the present situation is simply untrue.)

Any government, therefore, not urgently putting maximum thought and effort into disarmament as a top priority is morally at fault in its possession of nuclear weapons. Yours faithfully. TJOHN SARUM,

Moral indignation of poverty lobby

From the General Secretary of the British Association of Social Workers.

Sir. As part of the poverty lobby referred to by David Walker (feature, August 25) the noise to which we are contributing is for sufficient public expenditure on the poor as opposed to "extra", with the implication that already enough is being committed.

The poverty lobby will remain morally indignant where the propaganda of the right conveys the message that it is the fecklessness of the poor which is the target for action. The propensity for blaming the victim is always with us and seemingly more so in Mrs Thatch-er's Britain. Yet, as last year's Government-sponsored Barciay Report on the Role and Tasks of Workers affirmed: "The services contribution seriously under-financed and growth until a plateau of basic provision is reached". This needs to be coupled with that part of the MORI poll (not mentioned by Mr Walker) which uncovered widespread poverty of the old-fashioned, absolute kind. Cathy, therefore, has good reason to come for a handout - even skilful managers need basic resources to be successful - but the particular cupboard of many social services departments is looking increasingly Nineteen-sixty style social work ought not to differ from the 1980's form in that any competent social worker should form an assessment of the help needed through weighing the effects of environment and personality. Increasing self-reliance and the capacity of people to cope is the end we in social work share with the Prime Minister, but we differ markedly from her over the means.

However, if it really is the case that, as a society, we have less money available in order to spend our way out of the continuing problem of poverty, contrary to what Mr Walker says, we in social work have begun the serious business of thinking of new ways of combating the problem.

the MORI survey for LWT's Mr Walker said the survey showed seven million Britons do not know where the next instalment on their colour television rental is coming from. There is no such information contained in the survey. and we are at a loss to understand how Mr Walker arrived at such a figure. Is he perhaps confusing this with the estimated seven million people who have been in serious arrears on essential items such as heating, rent and rates over the past year? These items are hardly in the same category as colour TV sets. Second. 28 per cent of respondents said that they sometimes felt poor, neither the programme makers (LWT) nor the research agency (MORI) classified them as such.

Third, the survey measured support for a tax increase in order to enable everyone to afford those items which respondents had previously defined as necessities, not in order to "cure" poverty as Mr Walker stated. This is an important distinction. Yours faithfully,

STEWART LANSLEY (LWT), BRIAN GOSSCHALK (MORI), Market & Opinion Research international Ltd., 32 Old Queen Street, SW1.

The America's Cup

From Mr John H. Wiley

Sir, The America's Cup, in the sad absence of the boat herself, is a symbol of American pre-eminence in a particular sphere, demonstrated at a time when the United States was a young nation. I am unmoved by the thought that the trophies of Henley and Wimble-don regularly leave these shores, but if I were an American I should be in favour of an early amendment to the Constitution to ensure that the America's Cup would always remain the property of the United States.

North American genius produced the fast sailing ship. Every modern sailing boat owes something, in its hull or sails, to "America", just as sailing boats a hundred years hence will be the better for the efforts of the English, Australian, Dutch and Italian designers working on the challenge and Americans working on the defence.

Unfortunately, controversy over rules is boring. Endless elimination and larger police authorities, re-

races are boring. The finer points of yacht ratings are boring. The America's Cup races have intrigued the British for a hundred and thirty years and long may they continue to do so. Thanks to television, international sporting events are more varied and interesting than ever before. Now might be a good time to issue a challenge to a new race around the Isle of Wight. Such a race could be held at regular intervals: the size of boats could be restricted solely by overall length, the number of entries to one per country, with a maximum of six starters to each

A new event might allow some fun back into Rhode Island Sound if fun was ever a strong element in the history of the America's Cup for anyone but the onlookers. Yours faithfully, JOHN H. WILEY, 4 Grange Close, Canwick,

Complaints and press freedom

From the Editor of The Observer Sir. As a working editor one reads with wry amusement, tinged with exasperation, the various remedies" proposed for the press. In today's Times (September 1), for example, a fellow editor evidently views with equanimity the idea of TUC-inspired "artificial restraint" upon national newspapers (including, presumably, The Times, The Guardian, the Daily Telegraph, The Observer and the Financial Times of the Control as long as the Newbury Weekly News and similar publications are ex-cluded from these controls on grounds of special virtue.

Then Lord Briginshaw declares that "something must be done to abate the excesses of some sections of the press". It turns out, however, that he isn't referring to the section of the press over whose excesses he himself presided for so many years, but to the introduction of forms of "coercion" by which the NPA and the Press Council, rather than editors, would determine what readers should read.

Having recently been censured by the Press Council myself, I can vouch for the weight its judgments carry with serious journalists. But the first object of the Press Council, as stated in its articles of constitution, is "to preserve the estab-lished freedom of the press". That means defending the press as well as condemning its excesses.

The Press Council could only exercise the regulatory functions being wished upon it by abandoning that primary objective - and with it the allegiance of editors, on which, in a free society, its effectiveness has

Teenage pregnancies

From Mrs P. D. Riches Sir, Your report "Fewer teenagers pregnant" (August 16) has been drawn to my attention for comment since it contains some misleading conclusions. I should appreciate the use of your columns to correct these. Your report states that the number of teenage girls with unwanted pregnancies has failen and that abortions have only slightly increased. Statistics from the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys reveal that the total number of births to 15-19 year olds dropped from 81,797 in 1970 to 61,036 in 1980, However, the rate of illegitimate pregnancies per 1,000 girls resident in England and Wales in the 15-19 age group rose from 20.7 in 1970 to 29 in 1980.

During the same period the rate of abortions in this age group almost doubled from 9.05 to 17.64, while in the under-16s the rate increased from 2.7 to 4.6. There is overwhelming evidence that, contrary to what you might expect, the availability of contracep-tion contributes to an increase in the abortion rate, giving the lie to those who say that sex education reduces unwanted teenage pregnancies.

Yours sincerely. VALERIE RICHES, National Hon Secretary. The Responsible Society, Wicken Milton Keynes, Buckinghamshire. August 26.

Loss of farmland

From Professor Robin Best Sir, Your report (August 24) of my talk to the British Association correctly notes that the annual loss of farmland to urban growth has been reduced by some two-thirds since its peak in the 1930s. But the reasons for this are not stated.

The decline has come about largely by the careful operation of protective planning controls since the 1947 Town and Country Planning Act. In the past few years the dampening effects on develop-ment of the present recession have resulted in a further fall.

The danger now is that the recent weakening of planning constraints by the present Government, in conjunction with increased urban pressures as the economy improves. could quickly lead to a new upsurge in urban encroachment. Yours faithfully, ROBIN BEST.

.333 recurring

From Mr Paul Tempest

Sir, On no account should Sir Philip Goodhart (August 30) be encouraged to have us celebrate marriages, or anything else, of a third of a century.

It is bad enough, for most of us, trying to remember the same date each year for 20, 30 or more years. Random celebrations of a third, sixth, seventh, eighth or ninth of a century, occurring at different seasons of the year, would impose yet further strains on the institution of matrimony and set appalling precedents for the birthdays of indigents or sociable offspring.

As for a particular gem or mineral to mark a third of a century. I would suggest something radioactive (e.g., plutonium) or transparent (e.g., glass) to be selected unanimously by the Members of the Eccentrics. Yours faithfully.

Body and mind From the Reverend J. N. A. Bradbury

Sir, I am glad to learn from Professor Weatherall (August 29) that the doctors of tomorrow will be increasingly aware of the pastoral aspects of their work and the importance of their patients as individuals with personal and environmental problems."

When I first came to Tottenham four years ago I founded, with the United Reformed Church minister. a multi-agency group to meet every two months for interdisciplinary discussion of the local area's problems. The group has been well attended by social workers, community workers, teachers, the police, health visitors and others. But though health issues frequently appear on the agenda no doctors ever come.

Concerned by the extreme iso-lation in which it seemed to us the doctors were working, the group decided to discuss how we could narrow the gap between ourselves and the doctors. I wrote personally to the 45 doctors of our area to invite them to the next meeting. One doctor came. Two apologised. None of the others replied,

The manifestation of myths

Only when they are cleared will the significance of the doctrine begin to be felt. It is not necessarily divisive, nor necessarily the "Protestant versus Catholic" issue that popular myth says it is. All the churches could do with a dose of it; all the different manifestations of Christianity seem to suffer equally, in the present day, from the spiritual consequences of its neglect.

Luther accused the Roman Catholic Church of his day, and the papacy in particular, of preaching "salvation through good works". He was so adamant on the point that in his translation of the Bible, he added the word alone" after St Paul's famous phrase, and so "justification by faith alone" quickly became a slogan of the period.

Each Christian age has its own characteristic ways of veering towards heresy, and the neglect of the doctrine of justification itself suggests that present day heresies lie in that direction.

If Luther's teaching could be taken out of the arena of theological contestation, and accepted as a warning applicable to all the present forms of religious life, including those which regard themselves as Luther's only true heirs, his five hundredth birthday would be well

-MR JAMES LAING Contribution to the treatment of burn injuries

Mr James Laing, FRCS, who died on August 31 at the age of 64, had been a consultant plastic surgeon at Salisbury, Wiltshire, since 1954. During this exacting clinical practice he built up the Wessex Regional Burn Centre at Odstock Hospital, becoming its first director in 1968. It is for his notable contribution to the prevention of burns, the care of ourned patients and the dissemination of knowledge about burns throughout the world that he will be most widely remembered.

James Ellsworth Laing, known to his friends at "Jim", was born in 1918 at Blantyre in Scotland. He graduated MBChB at Edinburgh University in 1942, and four years later he became a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh. He came to his life's work in Salisbury after a thorough training in general surgery in Southampton and specialist plastic surgery training at Mount Vernon Hospital.

He was well recognized in the ofession, both academically and in plastic surgery. In 1973-74 he was president of the Wessex Branch of the British Medical Association, and was a member of he board of Faculty of Medicine at Southampton University. In 1977-78 he was president of the plastic surgery section of the Royal Society of Medicine. He was also a member of the British Association of Plastic Surgeons, and a civilian consultant to the Royal Navy.

At Odstock Hospital he designed a special burns centre planned to meet the particular requirements of burned patients and he organized a burns research laboratory to study outstanding problems of burn injuries and their management. This wellstaffed unit is now the largest in the country.

His wider influence in Britain included hosting an important burns conference in Salisbury in 1968 which led to the founding of the British Burn Association in which he became the first secretary and treasurer. He was the first executive editor of the journal entitled Burns which has since become the Journal of the International Society for Burn Injuries. In 1967 he published book on the Management and Nursing of Burns and he subsequently collaborated with the Central Office of Information, television and the Royal Navy making short films on burn prevention and burn treatment.

His vision however was worldwide. He was a strong supporter of the International Society for Burn Injuries in which he held the post of UK representative, and deputy secretary general. He was a member of the WHO Action Committee on Burn Prevention and he was treasurer of the European Burn Association. In European Burn Association. In addition he made some 20 or more lecturing visits to countries in Europe, the Americas, the Middle East, Africa, India, South East Asia and China, at the invitation of their governments, universities and medical societies, and the British Council.

The man behind behind these achievements was blessed with tireless energy and infectious enthusiasm which, in his work, he focused on burn prevention and the care of the injured. Faced with burned patients, he was warmhearted, understanding and supportive, as well as extremely experienced. Those who were fortunate enough to experience the generous hospitality of his home were often surprised by the versatility of his leisure pursuits, which included horse riding, a smallholding of land and a hoyish love of fast cars and computers.

Throughout his long illness he retained his courage and humour and visits to him were uplifting and memorable.

He is survived by his wife Mary, by his medical student son, Hamish, and his daughter Jenni-

MR LYNDESAY LANGWILL

A correspondent writes: Mr Lyndesay Langwill, OBE, who died in Edinburgh on September ! at the age of 86, was ecretary and Treasurer of the Scottish Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals from 1924 to 968, during which time the Society weathered the depression, the Second World War and the subsequent upheaval and developments.

Throughout this period of change, under his leadership, the Society continued to fulfil its objects and went from strength to strength, and its directors were guided and helped by Langwill whose patience, understanding and kindness towards his fellow beings, as well at to animals. endeared him to many people.

He was a man of parts, being secretary and treasure of the Central Council of Societies in Scotland for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and a founder and two grandchildren.

Honour of the World Federation for the Protection of Animals (now the World Society), in the affairs of which he took a very active part.

He was also involved in other educational and charitable work and was very well known for his interest in music. Not content with being a skilled performer upon the cello, he was an authority and a performer upon the bassoon and contra-bassoon, which led him to the authorship of a number of publications including books and articles on wind instruments.

Following his retirement, Langwill remained in Edinburgh and continued to give guidance and advice to the Society and served on its Board of Directors. He was appointed OBE in 1969.

"The first results are coming from a scientific satellite, the Solar Mesosphere Explorer, designed conditions are almost indepen-dent of the more turbulent distrubances of the lower Mesosphere Explorer, designed specifically to study the ozone layer in the upper atmosphere. Its findings are particularly important in trying to resolve controversies about possible destruction of the ozone layer, which protects life on the earth's atmosphere.
Nevertheless, the results be reveals cover the layers between 15 kilometres to higher than 90 kilometres. He reports that the mechanisms behind the chemical processes which continually break down and reform ozone differ at various heights. For instance, the satellite's measurements show strong seasonal variations in the ozone concentration at levels below 60

In one layer, the density of the ozone increases directy in proportion to rises in temperature. At a greater height, over 50 kilometres in the stratopause, the reverse is the case. Measure-ments in the region above the mesopause (85 kilometres) show a dramatic daily variation.

The satellite also carries an instrument for monitoring variations in the Sun's radiation, and a proton alarm system to detect the sudden ischarge of eneretic particles caused by an ourbarst on the Sun.) The satellite's instruments observed depletion of 70 per cent of the ozone at 65 degrees latitude, at a height of 78 kilometres, on the morning of the day that the proton burst was detected. In the afternoon the ezone level was depleted by only 10 to 20 per cent. Dr Brasseur says other ceasurements have to be made to supplement those of the satellite. One project is a series of stratospheric balloon measurements that will be made by the Balloon Intercomparison Campaign sponsored by the American National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Chemical Manufacturers' Association, and the Commission of the European Communities. That work will not be limited to ozone data, but will also analyse other molecules such as hydrogen chloride, hydrogen fluoride, nitric acid, and the oxides of nitrogen and chlorine.

Its principal objective is to measure azone and nitrogen oxides, also using a series of balloons which will be launched from the French base of Asian. base of Aier-sur-l'Adour. ## Sponsors for serious authors?

Nigel Viney, until recently, was Heinemann's production director. That is, he was responsible for That is, he was responsible for paper and printing and binding. He has now started working partitime for the Society of Authors, founded 99 years ago, to dream up ideas to help the book writers' union and its 3,000 members celebrate their 1984 centenary. One of his first suggestions, and it could only emanate from a sometime publisher, is that big business should sponsor authors. Thus, in addition to filling the coffers of the Conservative Party, Garden and a play or two for the RSC, backing yet another cricket competition and making a donation to a charity of its choice. Moneybags Ltd can back an author or two

The idea is not, in fact, that the business or industrial sponsor should obtain a piece of the action in Jeffery Archer, Barbara Cart land or even Graham Greene or Salman Rushdie, but in the kind of serious, non-fiction writer almost definitely it will not have heard of, or at least read. For the projected authors are those who receive modest advances and royalties from imprints such as Oxford and other university presses, Martin Robertson, Harvester, Croom Heim, Macmillan Academic, Routledge & Kegan Paul, Allen & Unwin and Pergamon. Between them, these houses bring out the majority of what are sometimes taken to be scrious contributions to scholarship and learning if not necess-

I do not believe that Moneybags Ltd (who, let us say, manufacture a wide range of industrial products) would attempt to nobble and influence writers they were persuaded to sponsor, though that is a danger which worries authors. I simply question what sponsoring com-panies would gain from the arrangement, unless they were to receive a percentage of the royalties if authors did better than anticipated. Kudos to directors and shareholders may be derived: from sponsoring yet another cricket competition but it would really look good in, say, Player's they had sponsored a biography of a medieval anchorite by Professor Pilsner or a study of the linguistic patterns of the Aborigines by Bruce Mackenzie, Ph D.

The Society of Authors is a present, run with visour, humour and style by a solicitor. Mark Le Fanu. He has only been in the job for a few years, and still retains the benefit of enthusiasm plus a real commitment to the wellbeing of writers. His predecessor, David Machin, was a publisher who left to become a publisher again. Authors tend not greatly to benefit when publishers turn philanthropist and propose schemes for their well-being. Mr. Viney, who hails from a successful printing family, no doubt means well but it would take a publisher to suggest that people other than publishers should back authors financially.

Publishers, now as ever, are in the business of publishing for one of two reasons, or a combination of both. They glean a frisson from associating with authors, books and ideas, and they can practise that pleasure for a living in a relatively unenergetic way, dealing from day to day with a myriad different matters - whatever publishing may yield as an occupation for gentlemen and, increasingly, ladies it is hardly boring - or they see it as an easy way of making a reasonable income as most (other) people in the profession or trade are still

The wrong organization is employing Mr Viney. It should be the Publishers' Association. The sponsorship of individual impovcrished writers rather than of publishers would be but a further humiliation to professional authorship, another nail in the battened-down coffin. Arts Council awards and grants from affluent foundations already allow publishers to pay the primary producer less well than they might and should, and sponsorship would intensify that process.

The sponsored book is already Bruckner's Ninth had hardly more common than we sometimes realize, although sponsor- was transformed. The stage was ship - for obvious, proselytizing surmounted by a carpeted dais: reasons - is often hidden or the air was heavy with the scent of disguised. But sponsorship should joss-stick; dedicated hippies had be of publishers, and the fact taken their 1960s gear out of should be acknowledged adequately on the books. Mr Viney were on sale in the buffet. It was and the Society of Authors should be thinking of ways in which the publisher - the author's employer, after all, even if he does not pay for the insurance stamps - can sell more books, and thus pay authors higher advances and better royalties.

It should not cease to astonish that the author is thought to be doing well if he receives 10 per cent of the published price, the bookseller doing badly if he obtains less than 35 per cent discount. The bookseller has higher oveheads? He also has higher oveheads? He also has higher than the bookseller and the bookseller are less than the sell at any times. thousands of books to sell at any given time, the author only one.

The crosses Yuri Lyubimov bears

For twenty years Yuri Lyubimov has struggled to keep his Taganka theatre in Moscow alive. Now the Taganka faces its greatest crisis after the closure of three plays by the Soviet authorities and Lyubimov has decided to speak out about his struggle for artistic freedom. Bryan Appleyard reports

For the last six weeks Yuri his own style at the Lyric Theatre in Hammersmith. He speaks no English so, when his flamboyant miming fails with the cast of over 20. his assistants Nicholas Rzhevsky and Boris Isarov step in to translate. It is an arduous task: Dostoevsky's novel Crime and Punishment, which opens tonight, is formidably complex. It was evolved over several years at his Taganka Theatre in Moscow and it comes to England after five years of patient negotiation between Peter James, the Lyric's artistic director, Lyubimov and the infinitely inscrutable Soviet

He has been described as the greatest theatre director in made the transition to opera with spectacular success. But it has also been 20 years of alternate fighting and wooing of the bureaucrats -the chinovniki as he calls them and Lyubimov is losing his

"I am 65 years old and I simply don't have the time to wait until these government officials finally arrive at an understanding of a culture that will be worthy of my native land. I'm tired after 20 years of analyzing their decisions. Most recently I feel that their decisions do not contribute to the cultural prestige of my country. There are times when they have to let me out, otherwise they would appear to be entirely conservative. But the majority of applications for my theatre to-work abroad have been denied. Every time I go abroad it is a complex, tense and humiliating situation."

He is a man in crisis. In the last six months he has been plagued by nervous eczema and bronchitis

"I created a number of works Lyubimov has been working in and I consider them to be extremely important to myself and to the theatre, because they are a new stage of creation for me both in the moral and aesthetic sense. These works are shut down. I cannot accept this."

The Taganka began as one small, old, proudly self-financing auditorium. Subsequently a second auditorium was built and the cost made Lyubimov dependent on state subsidy. It is hugely popular and queues of people hoping for cancellations wind nightly round the building ironically a large proportion of the seats are taken up by the very chinovniki who persecute Lyubi-mov - he does not mind, he hopes they may learn something.

> *I cannot allow myself to be trampled underfoot

Under Brezhnev Lyubimov: was frequently able to appeal over heads of the functionaries of various ministries of culture who tried to interfere. When Andropov came to power the first signs remained promising. After all, 19 years ago Andropov had gone to some lengths to thank Lyubimov "man to man" for turning away the two young Andropovs who wanted to be actors. But any thaw was short-lived. When Andropov fell ill his former rival for the leadership. Konstantin Chernenko, made a key speech attacking liberal intellectuals Chernenko is still in the ascendant and Piotr Demichev, the Minister of Culture and Lyubimov delights in pointing out, has high-level backings for his meddling. The mystery of why Lyubimov, at this low point in his relations with the authorities, was llowed to come to England may be explained by a feeling that he is less bother out than in.

rather larger crowds than media attention. Then Alive, a play with satirical overtones, was stopped and finally even Boris Godunov.

The banning of Pushkin's play was extraordinary. It is a central work in the Soviet pantheon of approved literature. Lyubimov had, however, made one charac-teristic change, in the play a Boyar upbraids the complacent Russian masses for doing nothing. He asks them: "Why do you remain silent?" Lyubimov's version had the same actor, this time auditorium at the end of the play and asked the audience; "Why do 1204 remain silent?".

He could, of course, soldier on in spite of the censorship, but he has decided to stand his ground, "Neither I nor the theatre can imagine continuing our work without these three productions. "Without them I cannot work. I cannot allow myself to be trampied underfoot. Yes, it is very serious, April 23 next year marks the twentieth anniversary of the theatre. So these functionaries have had enough time to define their relationship with us. The present conditions they have created mean that my work is impossible and I have told them so. I've offered my resignation. There is no reaction from Audropov. He has neither confirmed or denied it so I continue to work. They asked me what solution do I see to the present situation and I said the only solution I can see is my retirement. My offer was not accepted. I am a man of firm discipline and therefore I continue to do my work."

wife Katalin and four-year-old son Petya, came to England with his resignation on Andropov's desk and the fate of his theatre and creative life hanging by a thread. It is not the first time he has clashed with the authorities in an international context the stopping of his production of The Queen of Spades from going to the Paris Opera severely dented Franco-Soviet relations. Lyubimov: "The officials who control the theatre are incompetent in the arts"

The problem of the chinornika is made more complex by the fact that his words are suffused with the fire of Russian patriotism.

"It's a simple matter I was brought up in the moral values of our great Russian culture." I point to the two crosses banging round his neck.

"They are not just decoration."

Are you a Christian?
"I was baptised by parents." Are you a Christian?

And a communist?

"I've been in the Party for 30 years now. When I was relatively young the older members of the Party wanted to attract me. They thought I was an honest person and they wanted honest people to join the Party. They said decent people should join the Party. I believed them and I joined.

Lyubimov speaks of a Russian tradition, uninterrupted by the Revolution, and of Stalin's attempts to crush it. "He managed to have Mandelstam killed but he did not have Pasternak killed." Crime and Punishment is, of course, one of the high peaks of that tradition. Predictably Lyubimov ran into trouble with his version. He offended Russian schoolteachers with his absolute opposition to

"I think Dostoevsky would approve of my conception. All his works were directed to the good, to love, to firm moral principles. He turned out to be prophetic. He saw what was very difficult to see, what only came out in glimmers. He saw the assertion of the individual at the expense of his neighbours. The gradual loss of moral values. The world is in crisis now. What we can expect from that is hard to say. I hope for a gradual recovery because there

"I can understand all these things I have said may not be particularly appealing to the officials, but I am an old man and I feel that they should get used to a normal dialogue, I don't think they will change. The ones I have in mind are the ones who control the theatre. Most of them simply have to be replaced by more humane and educated people. They're incompetent in the arts."

The central image in Lyubi-mov's production is that of a door. It is an image of a change of state from one form of knowledge to another, from one argument to its opposite, from damnation to salvation. In the Taganka production one door opened on to the real street. Such images of transition are characteristic of the tradition, of which Lyubimov is a part, of a fugitive art, bruised by totalitarianism and forever hav-ing to switch from assault to persuasion, from bitterness to

"They've subjected me to all sorts of punishment. They never undertake a serious dialogue with me, they only lecture me. Perhaps not yet managed to penetrate their deep wisdom. It might be a large error on my part. I shall struggle to attain such wisdom."

Well, they don't dance like the Royal Ballet, do they? And even if the Royal were on peak form, Ballet's short visit would be welcome. There is no single correct way of performing classical ballet, but various interpretations of a shared tradition, differentiated first by national circumstances and inclinations, then by the wishes of choreogra-

Varied as the London repertory was, it showed only part of his was, it showed only part of his range: no comedy, no narrative, no big spectacle. However, it embraced extremes from the violent Symphony in Three Movements to the lyrical Davids-bundlertanze, the pure classical Divertimento to the mysteriously individual Mozartiana. The one common factor is a wish for the dancers to perform with maximum energy and clarity.

The company should come back soon. Gone, sadly, are the days when such visits were simply arranged. Complicated deals and substantial sponsorship are needed. Haitink: regulating the listener's rhythms and responses

Songmakers' Almanac

Wigmore Hall-

A song biography of Reynaldo Hahn, as it was described, became an evening of diverting pleasure on Saturday when the Wigmore Hall reopened after its summer closure. Fresh from their Edinburgh Festival tribute to Alma Mahler, noted on this page last Friday, the members of Songmakers' Almanac offered their portrait in words and music of an engaging petit maitre under the title of his precocious Victor Hugo setting. "If my verses had wings", composed when he was thirteen.

This and other songs, interspersed with some by his teachers (Gounod Massenet) and contemporaries (Saint-Saens, Faure) were strung on a thread of anecdotes and commentary spoken by the singers and the pianist, Graham Johason, who compiled it. Together they sought the retrievable memory of a composer who was Venezualan by birth and treated by adaption and transcript French by adoption, and whose unpretentious and acutely poetic flair graced the song and theatre repertory with civilized elegance.

What emerged most promi-nently was Hahn's skill in evoking time and place other than his immediate milien. His songs in the renaissance manner such as "Chloris" stylishly sung by Richard Jackson and the Troubadour verses of Charles of Orleans, were the most attractive kind of pastiche, while the Venetian dialect and its "eternal adolescence" as Hahn described it, prompted songs of hyrical ardour which he himself once sang while Gondola-borne among

Here they were given exquisitely felicitous sentiment without the least indulgence by Anthony Rolfe Johnson, whose subtlety of vocal colour also movingly enriched the "Autumn Song", from Chansons Grises, Hahns remarkable teenage settings of Verlaine. The other singers in these and the remaining items were Patricia Rozario, an oddły deep soprano who was only intermittently expressive, and Martyn Hill, placidly genteel even in the heartfelt poignancy of the Gautier setting "infidelite".

Venice film festival

Last year the Venico Film Festival celebrated its fiftieth anniversary. This year it celebrates its fortieth edition: what with Mussolini, the war, and political upheavals in the 1960s and 1970s, it has had a turbulent career, it has a remarkable capacity for survival though, and at a time when other festivals seem under threat (Los both in doubt and a number of smaller festivals seem likely to go under for want of funds), Venice is flourishing, with the return of a former director, the critic Gian-Luigi Rondi.

As the world's oldest festival Venice has always kept a perspective on the past. This year it presents retrospective tributes to Elio Petri and René Clair and the opening gala was the restored A Star is Born, which proves taloneside Napoleon and The Leopard) another of those monuments that overshadow the contemporary cinema. The new films themselves have so far without exception been explorations of the past. Kon Ichikawa's Gentle Snow is an adaptation of a favourite Japa-nese novel. Frank Beyer's The Turning Point, a Polish-East German coproduction, is set just after the war, and is the saga of a young soldier in a Polish prison, who is accused, interrogated and tortured by captors and fellow prisoners alike because of a mistaken identity. Beyer is clearly fascinated by the whole apparatus of false accusation but the film probably won official approval in Germany for its moral, currently expedient for the friends in the Warsaw Pact, that though Nazis were bad, it does not do to trust Poles either. The film's release was held up for a year or more by the Poles' understandable official protests at the finished work.

Drawing the wrong conclusions

Kings of Infinite Space, on BBC2 encountered before and which I last night, was a powerfully confused programme almost overwhelmingly presented by its writer, Charles Jencks, who had a most insistent North American voice, an obviously unshakeable belief in his own opinions, and a predilection for the phrase that resounds but trails a litter of

"Architectural power," he told us early on, nodding to Mao Tse-Tung, comes out of the barrel of a 4B pencil and those who can wield it reign like monarchs over their profession". I presume the "it" meant the pencil, but there must be many surely whose draughtsmanship is superb but whose concepts are flawed to an extent that will preclude them reigning over anything other than a drawing board.

Neither of Mr Jencks's subjects had any such limitation. Both Frank Lloyd Wright, who died in 1959, and Michael Graves, architect of the Portland Building and who Mr Jencks acknowledged as the leader of the post-modernist wave, could wield a 4B to some purpose and shared a belief that colour, ornament, and symbolism, abborred by modernists, had a significant place in architecture.

They wouldn't have agreed about everything. We saw the former in some interesting film clips. The latter was with Mr Jencks on his travels and we heard him say that many of his illustrious predecessor's drawings were "overly sweet". He thought the Guggenheim Lloyd Wright's death, a place to be seen in rather than a place to see paintings in. Mr Jencks frequently disagreed with Mr Graves and saw some "suppressed sexual symbolism in it. Mr . There is also widespread concern about the failure of British industry to meet the competition from imports to satisfy domestic demand. James Capel, for example, expects imports to increase by 3.8 per cent next year. Simon & Coates points out that domestic output of capital goods has scarcely changed averaging 6 per cent or more next since 1981, while imports have year, compared with under 5 per risen by half.

The economists are agreed that the most powerful engine of growth in the recovery so far has been consumer demand. Slower inflation, improving real incomes and lower interest rates have encouraged people to run down their savings and borrow more. But the debt-to-income ratio has become unusually high and the savings ratio has fallen between the middle of last year to the middle of this by about 3 percentage points to 10 per cent.

certain models at The world recession is continue ing to hit Sime Darby, the Malaysian conglomerate, where profits have taken a nosedive for the fourth year in succession. Full-year figures to June 30 show pretax profits tumbling 47 per cent to $M111.1m (£31.7m) on turnover reduced from $M2,727m to $M2,172m. Sime lays much of the blame for the latest setback on its Tractors Malaysia Holdings subsidiary which reported its first trading loss of $M10.9m against a pretax profit last time of $M61.6m.

Apparently, the demand for prime products and support services in the logging industry failed to materialize in the second half. This was due to adverse weather, lower export prices and

On the heavy equipment side, sales were hit by a build-up of stocks, which in turn hit margin and reduced operating profits. The smaller businessman in Malaysia has also been hit by the recession, and as a result Sime has experienced an unusually high build-up of repossession orders of new and second-hand equipment

Sime has now undertaken a programme of heavy rationalization in the tractor division to reduce overheads and workforce. Rising costs and the fall in the price of palm oil made a dent in the contribution from the plantations division. Pretax profits were more than $M2m lower at SM57.3m, despite higher yields. The only bright spot was the increase in the seiling price of natural rubber in the second half

The key question at monetarism's heart

The idea that the American promises disaster. A sharp economy should act as a locomotive for the world, dragging the rest of us into forward motion, is anathema both to the Reagan Administration and to likeminded monetary economists elsewhere, who are more conscious of the need to fight inflation both worldwide and in each country. But somehow it has turned out that way.

The combination of huge fiscal deficit and, in theory if not in practice, stout monetary aims, has led to remarkable shortterm growth - 9.2 per cent annual rate in the second quarter of 1983 - that has powered lagging progress in Continental Europe and Japan and enhanced our own early but more modest efforts. But has it been too good to be true?

So far, all appears well, with US inflation lower than our own and sufficiently modest for President Reagan to take credit for US price stability as a proximate cause of the strong dollar.

The idea that inflation and slump or stagnation are continuing alternatives has died the death both in our own election campaign and in the general economic argument. It needed an individualist with clout to revive it. Who better than Mr Milton Friedman, in many ways the architect of the US idea that, given monetary restraint, the budget deficit hardly mattered for inflation?

As ever there are no half measures with Mr Friedman. "Excessive monetary growth over the past year means that we are facing the near-certainty of an over-heated economy for the next few quarters at least, which will almost certainly mean a subsequent acceleration of inflation, probably in middle or late 1984," he writes in a Wall Street Journal column.

"Continuation of present levels of monetary growth reduction in monetary growth would mean reduced nominal GNP growth next year. Combined with the delayed impact on inflation of the recent monetary explosion, the result would be recession . . . there is no middle course that at this point will avoid both higher inflation and at least a decided slowing if not premature termination of expansion".

There can be no doubting that M1, the weekly basic money supply to which the markets and Mr Friedman pay most attention, was so far above targets that Mr Paul Volcker at the Federal Reserve Board was forced to abandon his projected growth range and set a new one, now being met, al-though dealers still have fears for the autumn.

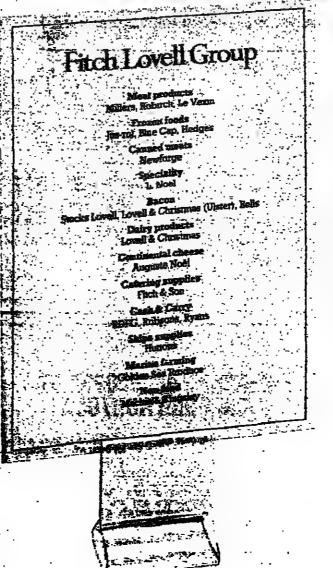

The conventional view is that inflation will rise in the United States next year, but only modestly, to perhaps 5 per cent, still lower than the OECD average.

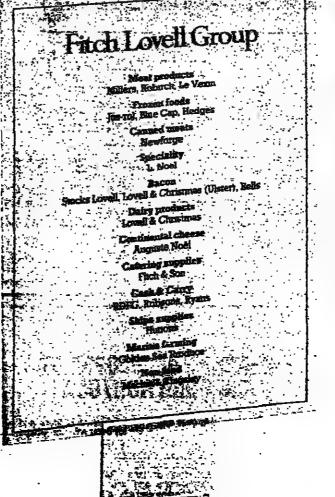

The real question, highly relevant here and at the heart of arguments about monetarism, is whether unduly high monetary growth in the early stages of recovery - what the technicians call falling velocity of circulation - is consistent with that elusive desirable, the switch to stage-two sustainable economic growth.

According to Mr Friedman, whose researches in this area are second to none, there is a cyclical fall in velocity of circulation in the downturn that should reverse when things improve. Experience here suggests that the credit and house perchase in the early stages of recovery simply need more money.

The Heath recovery showed this transition was hard to bridge. The denouedetermine will whether the upturn will prove to be just another financial cycle or a longerterm economic recovery.

It is now 10 weeks since there was any increase in the level of "adjusted reserves" of the "adjusted reserves" of the American banks. The rate of growth of the adjusted monetary base (banks' reserves plus currency) has slowed to a crawl in the week ending August 31; the monetary base actually declined by $100m.

Initial claims for unemploy-

This trade deficit is the reflection of the high level of US interest rates, which have raised the value of the dollar. Thus, the strong dollar, which has been severely criticized in Europe, is actually a substantial boon to European exporters. America has suffered a severe setback in its export trade and at the same time has permitted a buge inflow of imports.

These measures, all part of the phenomenon of the strong dollar, have permitted other exports to expand their share of world trade at the expense of in turn, the strong dollar has exercised an important drag on the forward movement of the American economy. As the money slowdown gathers force in the second balf of September and through October, interest rates in the US will fall. This will lead to a weakening of the dollar.

In turn, American exports will experience more success in world markets and US imports

In the past the foreign trade sector was not as important to the US. But today exports represent 10 to 12 per cent of gross national product. Now that money growth is slowing to a halt, the foreign trade sector will help to moderate the deflationary impact of the policy in force.

Kent's hopes flicker and die amid the gloom

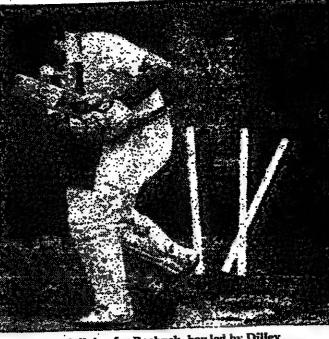

The final of the NatWest Trophy at Lord's on Saturday could have been a calamity, seen through the wrong end of a light meter. But thanks to the captains, Botham of Somerset and Tayare of Kent, it provided the usual capacity crowd with a full day's enjoyment, if not with one of the more spectacular finals. Somerset's victory by 24 runs, their fourth in the last five years in a one-day final, was, it anything, more comfortable than

Friday night was so vile and Saturday morning so bleakly impromising that at breakfast time there was more reason for expecting a blank day than almost a full one. In the event, the start vas delayed by only half an hour, while the teams persuaded themselves to take the plunge and although Kent lost, I doubt whether even they went home regretting they had played. The alternative was to come back today, by when the natural climax of the occasion would have

Tavare, having won the toss, had the difficult decision of deciding whether or not to field. While wanting his bowlers to take advantage of a grey morning, he knew that if Kent batted second they would almost certainly have problems with the light. Although the match was reduced from 60 overs a side to 50, that in fact is what happen

At lunch, Kent, especially Dilley, had done well, Somerset being 91 for four with Richards just out. Soon afterwards Botham was also out, caught off a skier at squar leg. Richards seems to play so casually, while others strain and struggle, that when he gets out rather carelessly, as he did now and also in the final of this year's Prudential World Cup, it is as though he is beig sure not to spoil the match.

Such were the conditions, so favourable to seam and swing, that Underwood, one of the great one-day bowlers, was not given a single over. As things turned out, Kent might have done better to illow Underwood his full quota of overs and include an extra batsman. It certainly made no ense playing him and then not powling him, even less when the Somerset bowlers to take the wickets which mattered most were Marks and Richards.

No dallying for Roebuck, bowled by Dilley

Needing 194 to win, Kent lost Benson in their first over, for the second wicket Johnson and Tavare added 59. At 60 for one, after 22 overs, Kent were winning at 88 for five, after 31 overs, they were not

Marks lived up to his reputation as a one-day specialist. He removed Johnson, Tavare and Cowdrey, Having also scored 29 he made Bob Willis's choice for man of the match fairly uncomplicated. The only other candidates were Dilley and Richards. Johnson was bowled by Marks, hitting across the line; Tavare, when looking good, pulled Marks, straight to deep mid-wicket, and in the same over Cowdrey. chafing too soon, was stumped down the leg side.

When Asiett was also smartly stumped on the leg side, it was asking too much of the second half of the Kent order to muster more than the first, Baptiste, Knott, Ellison and Dilley, however, all made enough brave hits to keep Kent's hopes flickering. Not until Ellison, batting with a runner after being hit on the knee by Garner, was ninth out at 162, did they finally die.

Shattering the bucolic calm

My pleasure in Somerset's win was marred by the behaviour of the Somerset crowd, with their incessant, boring chanting. I know we always say, on these occasions, that it is "only a minority" of supporters who are responsible, but it was a substantial minority.

I should think every non-partisan

successful amorty.

I should think every non-partisan on the ground was wishing by the middle of the afternoon that Kent would pull it off. When Tavare and Johnson were making the second-wicket stand, I even found myself half-hoping it would continue, because it diminished the for a while Why is it that Somerset followers have won themselves such an uncaviable reputation? It does not fit the county's public reputation, which is one of bucolic calm. This is not quite true, but after an adult lifetime spont in the West of England, I would think it as acceptable as such generalizations ever are. Life is fairly peaceful down here.

We used to say that it was partly due to their being starved of ancess for so long but they have had a good deal of it in recent years, so the sovelty should be wearing off. I thought it might be partly due to a provincial anxiety to cock a spook at Lord's, a defeasive assertion that

"We'm just as good as you be". But they also behave badly at Sunday League matches at Taunton (though there has been some improvement recently, thanks to stricter licensing hours). Part of the trouble, I am sure, is that there is no League football in Somerset. There is no other focus for county sporting interest than the cricket side.

There has always been an excitable streak in Somerset's cricket supporters. In their first season in the championship in the 1890s, they had an unexpected win at Taunton against the giants of Surrey. Sam Woods, who had taken the last Surrey wicket with the last pussible ball of the match, wrote that: "This match made Somerset cricket. Our supporters went barmy, threw their hats in the air and hit each other about." The trouble is that nowadays they tend to hit the other side about No, I am baffled. I am also baffled by the way that You'll never walk alone has become the Somerset song (as well, of course, as that of a hundred other clubs). It is intally inappropriate for community singing. It has no beat, it has a high note near the end which is beyond the range of the would-be singers, and results in an acutely painful whine. It has nothing to do with Somerset and can only encourage those members of their side who are tous deaf.

Dilley bowls in to join the first XI

in last year's NatWest Trophy final David Thomas, of Surrey, by taking three for 26 against Warwickshire, came near to plying himself into the England team for Australia. Today when the party for this coming winter's tour to Fiji, New Zealand and Pakistan is chosen, Graham Dilley, of Kent, will almost certainly have done so after his four for 29 in Saturday's final against Somerset, although he has been fit enough this season to take only 27 first-class wickets.

Dilley may be numbered with the 11 others who are virtually certain to go. These are Willis, Cowans and Cook as bowlers, Tavare, Fowler, Gower, Lamb, Randall and Gatting as batsman, Botham as an all-rounder and Taylor to keep wicket. This leaves three, possibly four places to be filled, the last of them being linked with the wicketkeeping

Assuming Taylor plays in all six Tests, as well as in the five one-day international, his understudy would get only eight days' cricket, the last of them two months before the end of unmistakable case for relying on Fowler to take the gloves when Taylor wants a rest and for asking Richards, of Surrey, to stand by at this end in case of an emergency.

England are looking, therefore, only for another batsman, possibly an opener, and two more bowiers, on of them fast and one slow, more bowlers, on of them fast and one slow, or both slow. Smith, who went in first with Tavare in the last two Tests against New Zealand, is an obvious possibility, or the place could go to a young Englishman such as Benson, Romaines, Lloyd, of Warwickshire, or Moxon. As left-handers Benson the Lloyd could have an advantage, owing to the incipient threat of Abdul Qadir's leg breaks when the team reaches Pakistan. when the team reaches Pakistan.

Edmonds deserves to go, although if only two spinners are taken an off spinner may be preferred to him, to provide a contrast to Cook, in that case I would plump for Pocock, whose experience would be valuable and who has never had a bad tour. On his last appearance, in Pakistan Edmonds took seven for 66 in 33 overs, a return that has only ever been bettered once in 2 Test match on Karachi's infamous featherbed.

Ovett has Aoki wins European Open from Faldo and Ballesteros world record Golf Correspondent

GOLF

Isao Aoki drew away from Nick Faldo to win the European Open championship, sponsored by Panasonic, at Sunningdale yesterday. With a fourth round of 69, one under par for the Old course. Aoki achieved a total of 274, six under par. Faldo took 71, exceeding the par of 70 for the first time, and dropped down to a share of second place on 276 with Severiano Ballesteros (a blistering 64 yester-day) and Carl Mason (68).

1,500 metres record yesterday, one week after his previous record had been broken by Sydney Maree, of the United States. Ovett ran 3min 30.78 sec to win the 1,500 metres at the independent meeting at Rieti, central Italy. His time was just less than half a second better than Marce's 3min 31,24 sec which had been set in Cologne last Sunday. For all the trumpeting it received on television, whose interest was of course vested, the tournament was curiously lacking in atmosphere for much of the day. Perhaps the realization that Faldo was not playing well enough to win - in the Ovett was much more decisive in vesterday's race than he had been in circumstances his 71 was a triumph of will over wilderness - and that vesterday's race than he had been in his record attempt in Koblenz four nights before. There, he had waited for pacemaking into the last lap, but on a sunny and slightly blustery afternoon in Rieti, Ovett followed David Mack, of the United States, through the first kilometre, and then struck out on his own. Ballesteros had started the day too far behind muffled the competitive

At it turned out, Ballesteros could afford to give Faldo seven strokes start, but not Aoki, once the Japanese had exorcised the indiscretions that caused him to drop shots at the second and fifth, Thereafter he was precision its Oriental self as he reeled off 12 par figures interrupted only by a free Overt passed the bell for the last lap in 2min 35sec, and strude on alone through the 1,200 metres in a time of 2min 49.12sec. He increased three at the short par-four ninth, time of 2min 49.12sec. He increased his lead during the last lap, and crossed the line, about 30 metres in front of his pursuers, in 3min 30.78sec. This is bound to be a severe disappointment for Faldo, with such a big lead before play began and a burning anxiety to get back to the United States as soon as possible in Overt was rightly exultant after he crossed the line and saw his new world record time. For it was exactly order to win enough money there to retain his exempt status. He has been given 24 hours special dispensation to reconsider his decision not to play in this week's lucrative Swiss Open because of a family wedding. family wedding.

Ballesteros revealed afterwards that he had been so unwell on Friday that he had considered withdrawing. Yesterday the bug clearly was still upon him but it did not prevent him from playing another superious prund of out. Ovett had originally planned to miss the race in Rieti, but after a dissatisfying race in Koblenz, where he had set his former world record three years ago, he decided to go to ltaly after all. He more than justified his decision. another superlative round of golf. With only a little more luck be could have been several shots better.
As it was, he turned on the heat coming home with four birdies, boling with characteristic panache a six-yarder underoeath the home green grandstand finally to frustrate Faldo.

He proved to himself and to the rest of the world that he is far from a spent force. There was much speculation after his uncharacteristically subdued race in the world championships, when he was placed fourth behind Steve Cram, that Open's ten-wear paint as meeting. Faldo, who was troubled by a book from the moment he struck a spectator on the second, had a last chance to draw clear in second place with a putt of 10 feet on the 17th but it cruelly rimmed the hole. That one stroke cost him £5,130 in prize money and increased Ballesteros' share by £2,600. The difference of £7,730 may figure large before the season is over Ovett's ten-year reign as, possibly, Britain's best competitive athlete in

LeMond raced at the head of

There were 38 kilometres remaining when LeMond made his second forward move of the day, approach-ing the one-in-ten summit of the Regensberg mountain climb. At this point, Serge Demierre, the Swiss champion, was 40 seconds ahead of the main field

Robert Millar, the only Briton left in the race, had launched a counter attack, only to open up a borner's nest behind him, and LeMond, Faustin Ruperez, of Spain, and Moreno Argentin, of Italy, all joined Demierre after a hectic descent through the streets of Rorschach,

FOOTBALL: THE FIRST DIVISION GETS ITS FIRST FEEL OF SYNTHETIC TURF

Rangers adjust to the elite with a contentious bounce

A new furnishing, the wall to wall carpet, was introduced to the first division on Saturday. Queen's Park Rangers, who thought they had heard the last on the subject of fresh decor are beginning to discover that the debate is far from over, particularly if they gain a place in Europe next

That is already a possibility. Consider the record of Rangers on their synthetic turf. Aston Villa were their fiftieth opponents and the thirty-seventh to be defeated. In losing only four of those matches, Rangers have scored 111 goals and conceded a mere 29. Impressive statistics but it would be a mistake to consider them a "home" team.

On the contrary, on their way to the second divisions championship last season, Rangers were the most successful away side in the top two divisions. More significantly, their asture manager, Terry Venables, is convinced that his players now believe they belong among the highest class. Their confidence has arrived in less than four hours.

"They were scared during the first half hour against Manchester United at Old Trafford." Venables said, "but they came off knowing they can compete with the best, We haven't picked up many points but I've been very happy with the way we've played." He can have few compains about Saturday's 2-1 win. Villa, the former European champions, were outplayed.

Tony Barton, Villa's manager, admitted that "but for Spink the match would have been over by half-time." He knows that he might then have had the arduous task of lifting a side six goals behind. But for Fillery's precise cross and Stamrod's clean finish in the fifth minute, Spink would have raised Villa's optimism even higher than they deserved.

His saves from Allen, twice, and Stainrod were notable enough but his feat on the half hour almost notable enough but his feat on the half hour almost defied belief. With three simple nods of the head, Mocklewhite, Gregory and Allen released Neill on course for a contender for the goal of the season. Spink touched the low drive on to one post and recovered in time to stop it bouncing in off the other.

The conditions were awkward anyway (the wind tugged fiercely at the flags above the stand but left almost untouched a stray balloon below). The bounce, still as lively as that of a pin pong bell, made them more so. McMahon, Curbishley and particularly Walters, found them close to impossible. Villa's midfield was therefore largely inoperative at least until after the interval. But, as they were closing the gap in superiority, their own centre forward, Withe, inadvertently widened the difference in the score. A looping back header from a throw-in, it was his first goal of the season.

Withe added his second in the final minute when Hazeil, who had otherwise dominated him, waylaid a back pass. Withe will have noted that Mariner, one of his main challengers as the leader of England's attack against Denmark in a fortnight has yet to fall in his aim for Ipsyich Town.

Rangers have spent the last six weeks putting sand on to the surface to deaden it. Was that to make the bounce more consistent, Venables was asked. "It always has been consistent," he replied. "High". Whereas Rangers are clearly accustomed to it, Villa were not. Nor will those visitors that follow

Currently, first division sides need adapt to the carpet for only 90 minutes a season but they may have to wear slippers for three hours of Luton. Town's ambitions to move to a new sporting complex in Milton Keynes are realized. The plan, timed to take place in 1985, is, however, far from

with their 4-I win over Sunderland.

Cheisea may have maximum points but their followers let the side down at the Goldstone Ground where the pitch was invaded at the end and four policemen; were injured. Mike Bamber Brighton's chairman, called for those responsible to be "jailed for at least five years" and Ken Bates, his counterpart at Cheisea, agree with him that "the government must do something about such hooligans". Have we heard that plea before?

the top of the first division is a reassum one for those of us who still cling to the belief that successful still cling to the belief that successful teams can also be entertaining. not be short-lived.

Their manager, John Lyali, has a pleasing attitude to the development of his team, seeing it as part of a historical process in which the club's traditional virtues of daring, inventive play are upheld. For example, of the second goal on Saturday, Lyall did not merely say that it was very good, which it was, but that it was 'the kind we like to be identified with'.

The key to the goal – indeed, the key to most of West Ham's good attacks – was the timing of the pass from midfield to penalty area. In this case, a delightful movement, tast, inside the Totienham Hotspur half gave Stewart the chance to play a "Mattin, A Cotte, D Swindshors, 7 Brooking, GPiles.

West Ham displayed an addition-al, mespected characteristic, which Lyall euphemistically referred to as "commitment." They needed to, for until conceding a second goal in the thirty-ninth minute, Tottenham had run the game. Even after it, they continued to enjoy most of the possession, but to ever diminishing effect.

Flying Habibti prepares to take Paris by storm

The style of Habibti's victory in the Vernon's Sprint Cup at Haydock on Saturday entitles John Dunlop's but he is certainly a talented racehorse. Barry Hills is now considering whether to let Robert Sangster's three-year-old take his channee in the Cambridgeshire. on Saturday entitles John Dunlop's filly to be considered one of the two best sprinters to be seen for more than 20 years. Habibu's seven-length defeat of Soba was a magnificent performance. She is now as preeminent over six furlongs as was Deep Diver over five with his triumphs in the Nunthorpe Stakes and the Prix de l'Abbaye in 1972.

Dunlop was quick to salute his heroine afterwards. "She must be the best sprinter we've seen for years. Habibu's the fastest I've seen, let alone trained." As in her victory Kempton's feature, the September Stakes, provided one of the surprises of the day when Hot Touch could only finish second to Lyphard's Special. Paul Cook was hard at work on the Mecca-Dante Stakes winner and Benson and Hedges Gold Cup runner-up at halfway and the pair were always fighting a losing battle. The result was also a shock for years, manion s the lastest I've seen, let alone trained." As in her victory in the July Cup, Habibit's superior-ity to her rivals was obvious throughout as Sayf el Arab and Sobs set such a blistering gallop. Her rivals are by no means paper tigers. Sand Stakes at Royal Ascot last time out and Soba was successful in 11 of her 14 starts in 1982.

Just to put matters into perspective, Moorestyle, Marwell and Sharpo, the champions of the three Sharpo, the champions of the three previous seasons, were sprinters of the highest class and totally admirable racehorses, but for sheer exhilarating pace Habibti must be ranked their superior. However, she is not yet entitled to be rated the equal of Deep Diver, who after beating Stilvi by two lengths at York, raced home four lengths clear of home Guard in Paris. Superb win by Luth Enchantee

From Desmond Stoneham

Lith Enchantee put up one of the finest performances seen in France for some time when she took vesterday's Prix do Moulin de Longchamp. Last into the straight, the daughter of Be My Guest made up some 10 lengths on L'Emigrant and went past the colt inside the final half furlong to win the group one event by half a length. Eight lengths away third came the English colt Wassi and then L'Attrayante, the long-time leader, Horage, and the veteran, Prospero.

Marvice Philipperon was amazed the performance of Luth schante. This is the best horse I have ever ridden and that includes Irish River," he said. Luth Enchantee was the winner of the group one Prix Jacques le Marois from l'Emigrant and Montekin three weeks ago and she will next contest the Dubai Champion race course and distance at Longchamp next Sunday.
Surprisingly it is still not known whether Sun Princess will take on the best fillies in France the same

It was impossible to believe that L'Emigrant could be beaten 300 yards from the post when he was still a good six lengths ahead of Luth Enchantee. But having given his all, he could not hold the filly's late challengs. L'Emigrant is also heading for the Champion Stakes.

Willie Carson considered that Wassi would have been closer but wassi would have been closer but for being hampered soon after entering the straight by the leaders Horage and Conerton. It was his fifth success of the year, all but one on the Continent, and puts him on course for the Arc de Triomphe, for which the Tote have him at 12-1.

Cauthen, who hopes to be available to ride him at Longchamp, sent him to the front half a mile out and pushed him clear in the straight to score by a long-looking three and a balf lengths from Abary with Pruna Voce (Philip Robinson) five lengths back in third.

Diamond Shoal was Ian Balding's third winner at the German course in six days, following the triumphs of Drumalis and Water Moccasin. He was also following in the steps of his brother. Glint of Gold, who won this race last year.

Balding, who thinks Diamond Shoal is now even better than Glint of Gold, will run Friday's winner, Water Moccasin, in the Mill Reef Stakes at Newbury Fulham meanly schieved last season. Portsmouth might very well accomplish in this on the evidence of their highly competent performance at Craven Cottage on Saturday.

Straight out of the third division as Fulham were 12 months ago. Portsmouth do, though it is admittedly early days yet, been to possess many of the ingredients that could whisk there right through to what few would dispute is their rightly place in the first division.

Daiglish had a crucial foot in events when it happened.

With six minutes left, Kannedy cleared quickly to Daiglish near the halfway line. A moment's heatation would have allowed Forest to regroup but the Soot immediately flicked the ball on for Rush to chase and slip it past Van Bruckelea. It was a fine match-winning move, executed in hearily more time than it takes to say "Daiglish".

Fulham have fresh and vintage gripe

Celtic win thriller

The creative ability of Paul McStay, whose firal figure bore a charmed life in the snap and snart of electrifying old firm conflict, provided Celtic with a goal which gave them the narrowest of victories in the close encounter at Parkhead.

With only four minutes to go and the score at 1-1, a fair reflection of the match, the class of the elegant teenage midfiled player glowed in the frantic fizy. McStay cut out a pass intended to start a Rangers' assault, in turn directed a superb McClair and saw his inspirational move end with McGarvey prodding the ball into the net after McClory had palmed-out McClair's cross. It was a game to delight the 50,000 spectators who relished the tensions, fierce physical exchanges and hysterical action of the old firm kind. The lightning strike of McCoist, who opened the scoring for Rangers at only 28 seconds, set for Rangers at only 28 seconds, set the pace for a match which had the Danish spy John Addssen, of Asrhus, who play Cettic in the UEFA Cup minimuming at the end of the game: "I have never seen anything as sterally contested it was more like war than football."

In spite of the enthusiasm of the count and the fire of the play there.

Prean proves he is world class

From a Special Correspondent, Bridgetown, Barbados

This year's fascinating World Cup. sponsored by Three Fives, which started sensationally with the defeats of both Chinese players, ended with intriguing twists among the results here early yesterday. Mikael Appelgren won the tournament, repeating the victory over his teenage compatriot Jan-Ove Waldner, which he had had in the European final in Budapest last year.

Another teenage Swede, Erik The tournament produced a Lindh, by coming third, gave competitive final. Appelgren won Sweden a clean sweep of the first 21-14, 13-21, 21-12, 21-17.

three places. This acheivement may not be equalled for a long time.

Not only did England's teenager.

Carl Prean, finish sixth to equal his remarkably high position in the lina game to the former world champion, Istvan Jonyer, and nearly overhauling him.

The tournament produced a competitive final. Appelgren won 21-14, 13-21, 21-13, 2

Kelleway inquiry

Gay Kelleway gained her tenth Gay Kelleway gained her teath victory since turning professional in June when Pretty Picture beat Bean Boy by one and a half lengths in the Golden Grain Hambleton Cup at Thirsk on Saturday. Miss Kelleway will not know how her actual score, however, until a Jockey Club inquiry tomorrow resolves the controversial question of her correct riding allowance. The may less four riding allowance. She may lose four winners because, having ridden 10 winners as an amateur, she was only entitled to claim 5lb and not 7lb.

courses, HND courses require only one GCE A-level (plus supporting O levels) for admission. Partly because of this under the separate BEC and TEC regime, the courses have often been wewed as second best for those students who flunked out at A-level. But changing times and attitudes have meant that BTEC highers are unlikely

Stop being mesmerized by degree courses and take time to descover what else higher education can offer. One of the encouraging trends of recent years is the renewed interest in vocational courses. But this interest has been in subjects such as law, accountancy and some of the engineering disciplines. Now, however, it is worth taking a wider view and considering the

- The reason is that from this autumn

a new reorganized body - the Business and Technician Education Council (BTEC) - is being formed to put some weight behind the non-degree sector of higher education.

Do not be alarmed if BTEC is completely unfamiliar to you. It is springing from the union of two highly respected bodies - the Business Education Council and the Technician

Education Council - which for almost a decade have been building up a solid reputation in industry and commerce for delivering first-rate qualifications. They remained largely unknown to the public, who often stumbled across them conly when their children came a cropper at Alevel and were looking around for an academic safety-ner.

With the setting up of BTEC, however, this alternative form of higher however, this alternative form of higher education is staking a claim to be equal it, tast different from, the traditional degree course, and to offer a qualification which may well be more useful when it comes to getting a job. Hasically, BTEC provides (among other things)—qualifications—called higher hational diplomas, which require two years of full-time study (or three years in a sandwich course), and count as a to suffer the same fate:

"There is a new realism about education and training these days", Mr John Sellers the recently appointed Chief Executive of BTEC", says. "People have seen that not all graduates are able to find jobs and that a degree is no longer a passport to employment Consequently they are now examining more selectively where a qualification can lead in career terms. As a result, what our higher diplomas can offer."

The proof of this is that admissions tutors for some HND courses are now requiring two A levels for entry although strictly speaking only one is necessary. Moreover, whereas some courses had places going begging they are now filling up fast.

"The whole purpose of our courses is to prepare the students for employment", John Sellers says. "Degree courses have other objectives so if their students end up unemployed they can't really complain. But we are failing in our task if our higher national diplomants do not get fixed up in

The relevance of the BTEC courses can be seen from the fact that over the past nine years BEC and TEC have drawn many of their students from industry and commerce on a part-time basis. The part-time certificate and the full-time diploma are essentially the same although the full-time courses, obviously cover a wider stretch of ground, But because of the extremely close links that BEC and TEC, and now BTEC, leave with industry everyone is confident that the courses are providing vhat employers require.

"Our courses are structured in such a way that they can be changed easily and quickly to incorporate new material or to meet the changing needs of employers", Mr Sellers says. "We are very sensitive and responsive to what is going on in the outside world and this has been particularly important in fields like Information technology where, at the moment, there is need for almost annual up-dates."

The range of subjects provided by BTEC is very wide. Because it provides vocational 'qualifications virtually every career which has a "professional" level is covered by it. On the scientific and technological side there are, among many others, courses in electrical and electronic engineering, plant process and control engineering maritime studies and road transport, building studies, dental technology, hotel and catering, and graphics and printing. Meanwhile in connexion with business and commerce the list of career specialisms covered extends from advertising and data processing, through travel and tourism, marketing and industrial relations, again, the flexibility of the BTEC system allows it to target itself very precisely on to the precise requirements of employers.

But BTEC is keen to maintain high academic standards. John Sellers is happy that the new realism is bending people's minds towards the value of vocational qualifications. But he does not intend to neglect the educational mustn't allow the pendulum to swing too far in the other direction", he says. Consequently the higher awards are being brought increasingly in line with the academic standards of the professional bodies. Amidst those now recognizing the awards are the Chartered Institute of Transport, the Royal Institution of Chartered Sur-veyors, the Institute of Biology and the Royal Institute of Chemistry. A drive is now taking place to secure arrangements with some of the prestige bodies, particularly in the fields of engineering and accountancy. It is also possible in many instances to transfer from HDN COURSES TO a degree course.

They are not the back door to a degree'

But BTEC is anxious not to project its courses as a backdoor to a degree. Instead, it is confident that because students and their parents have started to scrutinize higher education much more carefully for career-relevant courses, the assets of a BTEC course

Israeli convoys retreat south from the Chouf in Operation Millstone

In an operation officially code- the new front line parallel with square miles now still under amed "Grindstone", but more the Awali River. Israeli control. accurately and appropriately translated from the Hebrew as "Millstone", Israel yesterday abandoned some 230 square miles of Lebanon with a speed which reflected national disen-chantment with the more grandoise aims of last year's war.

Although the pull-back had not been scheduled to begin until dawn, as early as 10.30pm on Saturday night the Star of David had already been lowered over many hard-won positions in the Chouf Mountains. The retreating convoys made their way through the darkness with green taillights to distinguish them in case of

By morning, scores of armoured vehicles were lining the beach North of Sidon, their crews impatiently waiting to be evacu-ated by the same cumbersome landing-craft which had ferried them there fifteen months ago. Frogmen ringed the boats and Israeli jets flew regular patrols

A few miles further North on the shattered outskirts of Damour, we could clearly see the clouds of dust thrown up by the heavy shelling which followed Israel's twice-postponed departure. The air was heavy with the crump of artillery fire, and the area resembled a no-man's-land with no sign of any replacement forces to take over.

Whatever the Begin Government may have wanted, there was no way of disguising the relief among the hundreds of soldiers involved in the redeployment, a convenient piece of military jargon used to describe what was in effect a hasty 20-mile retreat to anti-terrorist drive" in the 1.080 the border."

We are all very happy to be saying goodbye to the Chouf, explained a beaming 19-year-old private from Haifa. "Of course, we are worried what will happen now to the Druze and Christians, but that is not our war." The weary looking crew of his armoured personnel carrier nodded emphatically.

"No more than for the battles in Cambodia or Argentina", he replied sharply. "I mean, why should Israel bear responsibility? Why should we have waited any longer? We have waited long enough and we have allowed more and more time."

Senior Israeli officers in Sidon insisted in the face of Lebanese government denials that adequate notice about the pullback had governments.

"They have had a year, just how much time do they need?", asked one lieutenant, with a note of despair.

Costing £25m. the redeployment is soon expected to start making significant savings in the present £660,000-a-day cost of Israel's continuing involvement in Lebanon. It will reduce Israeli manpower in the country by a third and soon be followed by

The part of southern Lebanor approachable from the North by only three main crossing points, a natural defence barrier which has added to the impression of a long-lasting partition. Bearing in mind the fate of the territory conquered from Jordan in 1967, this part of Lebanon has now been dubbed by Israeli doves as "Begin's North

Although more consolidated and easier to defend, the reduced area under occupation is still fraught with danger. This was brought home to us with uncomfortable force yesterday as we drove back towards Israel with a retreating column of tank

At a remote spot 12 miles behind the new front line, the convoy screeched to halt and some of the guards began firing wild bursts of sub-machine gun fire into a nearby orange grove. As the journalists clutched for the regulation flak-jackets, which some had unwisely abandoned in the midday heat, local residents at been given to the Beirut a watermelon stall gazed on with a practiced inscrutability.

Just around the corner, a 30foot stretch of high concrete wall had been blown across the road as the retreating armour was at its peak. "As long as we are in Lebanon, this is the type of incident we are going to have to face," explained a shaken reserve "The only way to stop it would be to clear a two hundred yard-wide strip along each side of the road from Sidon all the way to due to leave the Chouf - more than two weeks ago, a Lebanese official told me he believed September 4 would be withdrawal day - and divisonal army staff meetings had been held between Israelis and Lebanese to attempt some kind of coordination.

But it was Israel which originally armed the Phalange and brought them into the Chouf. They later allowed the Druze to receive heavy artillery of their own. The Syrians were meanwhile content to supply weapons to the Druze while giving them encouragement and occasional artillery support. It is a melancholy

Druze shells.

The Lebanese Army chose to take no action against the Phalange - once again reinforcing Muslim suspicions that the Army is taking the Christain Maronite side in the fighting - but concentrated insted on Druze artillery positions newly set-up at Shweifat on the old Sidon Road.

To this effect, the Lebanese Army placed a 122mm artillery piece a short distance from the British Army's headquarters at bomb exploded in the same Hadeth, a gun that pinpointed its district, killing nine people and own position by sending up wounding many others.

Soldiers of the Queen's Dragoon Guards, who watched the battles from their rooftop, found shells whizzing over their heads, although by last night the druze had not chosen to fire back in the direction of Hadeth.

Lebanese artillerymen also fired barrages from guns positioned across the airport road from the American Marine contingent. The Americans reported no casualties although an Italian soldier of the multinational force was wounded.

South Korean airliner over Soviet Asian territory last week occupied many leading articles in both the tic and foreign press at the weekend. vesterday that it was in the outside world that the Kremlin should be damaged for the appalling crime of shooting down an unarmed civilian airliner. "The Russian leadership, for whom amorality is a basic code of behaviour, is unlikely to be abashed by protests. The Soviet people, living in the case of a closed police state, are unlikely even to hear of them," the paper com-

The Observer insisted that this "brutal act" should not be allowed to hold up the development of arms limitation talks. Indeed, the more international tension is reduced, the more chance there is of preventing a repetition of the Sakhalin disaster

China's communist party news-paper, the People's Daily said yesterday that the Soviet attempt to yesterary that the sown anestop to cover up the downing of the airliner "only adds fuel to the flame of international indignation. It is intolerable conduct." the paper said in a commentary from Washington

The New York Times said of the disaster: A measured response requires proper measure of the Soviet offence: a callous attack on on the control of the mined to lead such a campaign even as he persists in weary pursuit of other agreements with the Kremlim. Thus to build on tragedy is the meaning of civilization.

Nature notes

After the corn is cut, rooks and jackdaws search the stubble; flying systematically from one field to the ext. House-sparrows thro next. House sparrows throng the hedges where stray heads of corn have been left. Some farmers have begun to plough: this brings in the black-headed gulls, who follow the plough as though it were a ship. Besides eating worms and leather-jackets (the larvae of the dadly-loughless) they sometimes catch oug-legs), they sometimes catch field-mice turned up by the ploughshares. Kestrels and little owls also come to the ploughing heasants stalk through the grass at bnesants state through the grass at the field's edge.

Many high hedges are completely covered with traveller's joy, or old man's beard: the greenish flowers are giving way to the fluffy seeds. Hedge woundwort is still in flower in shady spots; red valerian is abundant on old walls and the sides of quarries. Horse-chestnut leaves are patterned with green and yellow, dead brown leaves are crumbling to dust under the limes. Field grasshoppers sing in chorus in the dry grass, robbing their hind-legs against their wings, great green bush-crickets chirp in nettles and their hard forewings together.
